Coal Strike Likely to End Tomorrow, U.M.W. Hints

Big Local Votes To Resume Work; WLB Takes Dispute To White House

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

As the War Labor Board took the 20-day-old strike of Pennsylvania anthracite miners to the White House for possible presidential action, informed officials of the United Mine Workers of America stated yesterday that it was "a fair assumption" that the strike would end sometime tomorrow.

U. M. W. officials made the prediction after analyzing returns from the strike area which showed that the South Wilkes-Barre local which started the strike originally voted to return to work yesterday along with three others from Olyphant, Pa. U. M. W. headquarters also had information indicating that two locals at Hazelton, Pa., where 2300 men went out yesterday for a second time, would go back to work today.

Seven members of the War Labor Board carried their report on the case to the White House late yesterday and discussed the matter for more than 30 minutes with White House Secretary Marvin McIntyre and Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes.

"Under Advisement"

A statement from President Roosevelt calling upon the strikers to go back to work as a last resort prior to possible Government action seizing the struck mines was viewed as the likely result of the White House conference.

After leaving the conference, Board Chairman William H. Davis told reporters simply:

"In accordance with usual procedures in such cases, the War Labor Board has just delivered to the Secretary to the President its report on the anthracite coal case. Any further comment will have to come from the White House."

McIntyre said that "the President has the matter under advisement."

The key local which U. M. W. officials regarded as the "bell wether" for the entire group of striking locals—at the South Wilkes-Barre colliery of the Glen Alden Coal Co.—voted to return to work by the close margin of 230 to 226. About 800 failed to vote and 12 ballots were disqualified, the Associated Press reported.

Not Satisfied

However, there were indications on the scene that some of the large majority that failed to vote might still be dissatisfied and fail to report for work today.

(Early yesterday, the Associated Press estimated that a total of 12,-

Brown Takes Over as Price Administrator

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Taking over the hottest spot in the war administration shortly after he had been confirmed by the Senate, Prentiss M. Brown, new OPA administrator, yesterday told friends he expected first to survey the operation field offices of the Price Administration.

He went immediately to the office of the price administrator, where Leon Henderson, his predecessor, will remain long enough to accquaint Brown with the background of his new job, then leave for Latin America on an extended rest trip.

Shortly afterward, Representative W. Sterling Cole (Republican) of New York introduced a resolution in the House authorizing a broad investigation of price and rationing regulations by a select committee of nine members.

Cole proposed that the House probe should determine the justification and fairness of price limitations and regulations, and of consumer rationing of essential commodities, as well as the reasonableness, fairness and necessity for rules and regulations relating to price limitations, rents and commodity and service rationing.

In a statement, Brown said he did not fear the difficult job before him and intended to devote his "entire time and energy to the task of preserving our domestic economy."

"Price control and rationing are not impositions on the people, but a protection to them," Brown declared.

D. C. Board Revokes Gas Books In First Hearings Under Ban

First cancellation of gasoline ration books as the result of alleged pleasure driving occurred in Washington last night when three persons, one a woman, failed to appear before Board No. 42, at Twentieth and Evarts Streets Northeast.

Those who lost books by cancellation were: Phillip F. Bender, whose address was given by the board as 1156 Oates Street; Mary C. Fitzgerald, 1252 Florida Avenue, and Henry Simmons, 1923 Benning Road. All addresses are Northeast.

In addition the board voted to confiscate six coupons from the book of Nick Vlahos, of 1236 Eighteenth Place.

The case of Adolph Browand, 1212 Owens Place, was taken under advisement for future action.

Cases against Paul Boyd, 1271 Morse Street, and Joseph G. Cinfolo, 3106 Monroe Street, were postponed until today.

Another hearing was held last night by Board 11 at 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest at which only three persons appeared. Leon W. Pearson, whose address was given by the board as 2131 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, told board members he was an employe of the Navy Yard and that he had just moved to 2401 Calvert Street Northwest, near the Shoreham Hotel, and that his car was seen on January 8 parked near the hotel. He said he had parked it as close to his home as possible.

He was advised to register his change of address with the rationing board.

A car registered in the name of Mrs. Thelma S. Hess, was listed by the OPA because it was parked near the Shoreham Hotel the night of January 8. Karl Hess, reporter for a Washington newspaper, testified that he used the car on business and that night had given Chief OPA Investigator C. N. Workman and another investigator a lift to the Shoreham, where he was going on an interview, from the Chevy Chase Ice Palace.

H. O. Eckert of 2321 North Wakefield Street, Arlington, Va., a representative of the Indian Supply Mission, told board members that he had driven a car registered in the name of the mission to the Shoreham to attend a business conference.

The first hearings by any Washington board were scheduled for 4 p. m. by Board 40 at Seventh

Supreme Court Affirms Ruling Against A.M.A.

D. C. Medical Society Also Involved in Group Health Case

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The Supreme Court yesterday declared that the antitrust laws protect cooperative medical enterprises—like Group Health, Inc.—from the interference of traditional professional bodies, like the American Medical Association.

The court's ruling, which affects cooperative medical experiments in many cities, came with affirmation of the conviction of the A. M. A. and the District Medical Society of violating the Sherman Antitrust Act in their opposition of Group Health, Inc.

In receiving the appeal, the court accepted for decision the question whether "a physician's practice of his profession constitutes 'trade' within the terms of the antitrust laws." However, this question was not decided.

Justice Jackson, in the opinion, explained that the court was able to dispose of that issue by declining that the activities of cooperative medical groups in providing medical care for their members were certainly "trade." Accordingly, the court found restraint of cooperative medical enterprise was a violation of the antitrust laws, no matter who did it, whether professional organizations or competing business concerns.

Having decided this point, the Court held that the indictment of A. M. A. and the District society had charged unlawful restraints of the trade of G. H. A. and that the Government's evidence at the trial had proved these charges. The Court ruled, also, that the professional groups were not entitled to the immunity from prosecution provided in the case of disputes over terms and conditions of employment. This immunity, which

Court Upholds 'Fair Hearing' In Labor Case

Board Must Hear Evidence of Violence In Indiana Dispute

By William R. Spear
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court upheld yesterday the right of a Circuit Court to see that a Labor Board case "has been fairly heard."

Specifically, it upheld a requirement by the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals that the Labor Board hear evidence of alleged dynamiting and other violence by a local of the A. F. L. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers before the court would enforce a board order against the Indiana & Michigan Electric Co. of South Bend arising from the union's charges of unfair labor practices.

Grants Courts Discretion

The board held that the alleged violence was immaterial to its findings but the Circuit Court ruled that the evidence might be material and the Supreme Court agreed in a 5-3 opinion, Justices Black, Douglas and Murphy dissenting.

"The (Wagner) Act accords a great degree of finality to the Board's findings of fact, and this Court has been insistent that the admonition of the act be strictly observed," said the majority opinion by Justice Jackson. "But courts which are required upon a limited review to lend their enforcement powers to the Board's orders are granted some discretion to see that the hearings out of which the conclusive findings emanate do not shut off a party's right to produce evidence or conduct cross-examination material to the issue.

Wage-Hour Decision

"The statute demands respect for the judgment of the board as to what the evidence proves. But the court is given discretion to see that before a party's rights are finally foreclosed his case has been fairly heard. Findings cannot be said to have been fairly reached unless material evidence which might impeach, as well as that which will support, its findings, is heard and weighed."

In a wage-hour law decision, the Court ruled unanimously that "the applicability of the act is dependent on the character of the employes' work" and that if a worker's activities relate to goods in interstate commerce, he is covered by the act. But it said that "we cannot conclude that all phases of a whole-

2 GOP Women Members Placed On Major House Committees

Two Republican women members of the House were chosen yesterday by their party's committee on committees to fill vacancies on major committees.

Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut was named on the Military Affairs Committee and Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine on the Naval Affairs Committee.

"In singling out the women members for these assignments," said Minority Leader Martin of Massachusetts, "the committee was guided by a realization that the women of the country take an important part in the war effort. In both the Army and Navy, thousands of women are performing splendid service."

Other committee assignments announced by Martin included:

J. Leroy Johnson of California to Military Affairs; Grant of Indiana, to Naval Affairs; Hill of Colorado, to Agriculture, and Fellows of Maine, Lewis of Ohio and Towe of New Jersey, to Judiciary.

Representative Englebright of California was reelected Republican whip.

Down to Action

By Robert De Vore

Senate and House Republicans yesterday joined in formally submitting to Congress legislation to create a joint committee on control of Administration spending with authority to hire expert investigators, but while Democratic leaders were quick to indorse the project in principle, they remained noncommital on the proposed technique.

Nevertheless, the congressional drive for economy gained strong headway in the direction of making savings in direct war expenditures as well as in outlays for "nonwar" agencies.

Calls for Joint Committee

A resolution, introduced by Senator Nye of North Dakota and Representative Wigglesworth of Massachusetts, ranking Republican members of the Senate and House Appropriations Committees, called for establishment of a Joint Committee on Budgetary Control composed of 10 legislators, 5 each from the two appropriating committees.

The committee would be empowered to investigate fully Federal expenditures on a year-a'round basis, with the assistance of trained budgetary investigators. The bill proposes to supplement the present congressional practice of periodic budget study for a relatively few weeks out of the year, with constant spending investigations.

RAF Batters Berlin in 2d Great Raid

London Reports 'Trifling' Damage In Another Nazi Retaliation Attack

By Edward D. Ball
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 18.—Berlin was battered for the second successive time last night by a strong R. A. F. force which dropped hundreds of tons of the biggest bombs the world has ever known and set great fires in Hitler's capital with perhaps 100,000 incendiaries.

The loss of 22 big bombers, compared with one the night before, was a heavy price to pay for any raid, but British observers said it was not prohibitive in view of the large number of aircraft attacking the very nerve center of the German war machine.

"A great load of bombs was dropped and, by the end of the attack large fires were burning," the Air Ministry said.

Two air raid alarms at Bern and Basel, in Switzerland, 40 minutes apart, beginning shortly after 11 p. m. (6 p. m. E. W. T.) tonight hinted to observers that the R. A. F. was shifting its blows and was now giving Italy a taste of what Berlin took over the weekend.

Two Coastal Areas Bombed

Meanwhile, two southeast coast areas in England were bombed tonight in retaliatory raids in which the German airmen broke through one of the fiercest barrages residents had ever heard.

A brief night alert sounded again in London tonight, when a few Axis planes crossed the coast and headed up the Thames. Some were driven back quickly and those which approached the capital environs caused only "trifling" damage. Crowds scurried to the shelters, however, and stayed there after the all-clear, expecting another alert. Slight gunfire was heard.

At Least 12 Killed in London

Some speculated that the devastative one-two stab at Berlin was part of a softening process behind the Nazi lines for the opening this year of a second front on the continent. German night fighters which had been concentrated in the Ruhr to combat persistent British attacks there apparently were shifted hastily back to Berlin, accounting for the heavier price the R. A. F. paid.

While the explosives and fire bombs were chewing up the Reich capital on the second night, the Germans flew over London in two comparatively weak retaliatory raids.

"Some damage was done, but it was nowhere on a large scale and

Unkindest Cut of War

Women Vainly Quest for Knives To Slice Their Daily Bread

If you have no bread knife in your home, your chance of purchasing one have been sliced to the bone—so hundreds of Washington housewives learned yesterday when they bombarded hardware stores and other knife-selling establishments with requests for same, following the Office of Price Administration ruling prohibiting sale of ready-sliced bread.

Store owners reported their supplies of cutlery already were low because of the steel shortage, and that the ladies finished off what was left as soon as the OPA regulation was published.

Meanwhile, those householders who managed to outguess the OPA and buy before the shortage were faced with another pretty problem in kitchen management. With knife in one hand and unsliced bread in the other, how can a lady spoiled by the Machine Age turn out a workmanlike job of slicing?

"We bought a bread knife years ago," said Mrs. Charles R. Grant of 405 Battery Lane, Bethesda, Md., "but we didn't need it so we used it to slice oranges—and now it's broken. So I bought my first loaf of unsliced bread today and promptly made several dozen nicks in my nice porcelain kitchen table with the butcher knife."

"Oh, for the days of the old-fashioned bread board!" sighed Mrs. Frank P. Lozupone of 115 North Fairfax Street, Alexandria, Va. "I used to dread slicing my own bread just for little party sandwiches—and now I'll be doing it for the duration. But there is one consolation. At least, after I learn the knack, I can make our table slices thinner than machine-sliced bread."

"I need to take a short course in how to cut bread to fit my toaster," said Mrs. Charlie Malone, wife of the Redskin football player. "I know of a bakery that always has sold the best bread imaginable, but I never patronized it because I hated to do my own slicing. Now, I guess I'll go there and buy some; I might just as well practice on top-notch quality as any other."

One naval lieutenant predicted a race of women with furrowed

brows, bad tempers and chopped-off thumbs as a result of the new regulation.

"I've never seen a woman who could wield a knife or a hatchet with any dexterity," he said sadly,

Allied Airmen Beat At Rommel's Corps; Little Action in Tunisia

By Stephen Barber
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 18.—The British army in Libya, driving Field Marshal Rommel westward along a 70-mile-long front stretching inland from the coast, stood tonight less than 100 miles from Tripoli, the greatest port left to Italy in Africa, but now so scarred by bombing that it is no longer considered a major base.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's renewed offensive, which had rolled about 100 miles since the destruction of Rommel's main line at Buerat el Hsun, was going forward along the coast and from the vicinity of Beni Ulid inland. Thus on his left, Montgomery was cutting straight across the Tripolitanian hump, while before him the Allied air force beat at the retreating Axis forces. Squadrons were being moved up rapidly as air field after air field fell into British hands.

Total of 194 Planes Downed

Action in Tunisia again was virtually at a standstill because of rain. Allied headquarters announced that small bomber forces had attacked road and railway transport moving from the Axis-held supply ports and reported the destruction of three German planes and the loss of two Allied aircraft.

(Recapitulating action from the beginning of the Tunisian campaign through January 15, the Twelfth United States Air Force announced that 194 German and Italian planes had been smashed by United States fliers against the loss of 97.

(British light naval forces and submarines in the Mediterranean sank or mortally forced aground five merchant ships and damaged an escort ship, the Admiralty announced in London.

(In addition one submarine shelled a train on the toe of the Italian mainland and left it aflame.

(Two of the ships were sunk by submarines near Sardinia and another was hit by submarine torpedoes and forced aground near Genoa.

Axis Shipping Assaulted

(Two other ships were sunk Saturday by light naval forces northwest of Tripoli and east of Tunisia, and the escort ship damaged.)

General Montgomery's rapid advance was overrunning resistance which in some areas was fairly heavy—pockets of artillery batteries, machine-gun nests and minefields.

British headquarters here disclosed that the air force attached to the Eighth Army had gone into the Tunisian theater to support the Allied operations there, in addition to keeping Rommel's retreat under punishing fire. Two enemy ships were successfully attacked by planes off eastern Tunisia and Axis transport on the road westward from Tripoli to the Tunisian port of Sfax was assaulted.

A new bombing attack on Tripoli was reported, while enemy

U. S. Steps Up Air Assault In Solomons

Offensive to Clear Japs From Islands May Be Taking Shape

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Heavy air attacks on Japanese bases in the Solomon Islands area are being intensified and extended, the Navy reported yesterday, apparently to forestall enemy attempts to retake Guadalcanal.

In 24 hours United States bombers made six raids on the northern Solomons, starting great fires. Targets were much-bombed Munda, and the islands of Bougainville and Ballale.

On Guadalcanal itself United States troops continued their pressure on beleaguered Japanese forces, mopping up pockets of resistance in the dense and hilly jungle. The Navy communique yesterday said about 150 Japanese were killed in this fighting Saturday (Solomons time) and a number captured.

The same day Army Flying Fortresses bombed Ballale, a tiny island three miles northeast of Shortland Island, starting fires visible 50 miles away. Ballale also had been bombed the previous night.

Friday United States bombers ranged over the Japanese-infested portion of the Solomons, raining destruction on the Kahili area on Bougainville, where two large fires were started. New Catalina flying boats later that night took up the unending task of bombing the enemy airfield at Munda, on New Georgia Island.

While increased bombing in the Solomons followed intensified Japanese efforts to land supplies and reinforcements for their forces on Guadalcanal, it was thought likely here that this air activity might presage a United States offensive northward. Japanese land positions on Guadalcanal have been under increasing pressure for several days, pressure which last week drove the Japanese from the 1000-foot ridge of Mount Austen, dominating Henderson Field.

Cut off from outside aid since mid-November, the Japanese on the island were considered near exhaustion physically and mate-

U. S., British Prisoners Escape When Plane Blasts Italian Sub

By the Associated Press

Valetta, Malta, Jan. 18.—The harrowing confinement of four American and three British prisoners of war in the torpedo room of an Italian submarine and their dramatic rescue when the craft was blasted by a British plane in the Mediterranean was disclosed today—one of the oddest incidents of the war to date.

The seven Allied prisoners had a close call, because when the submarine was bombed the Italians gave way to panic and scrambled for the conning tower and air in an every-man-for-himself dash.

The four Americans were 2nd Lieut. E. S. Millechamp, 24, of Lake Wales, Fla.; 2nd Lieut. J. C. Lentz, 25, Paris, Tex.; Lieut R. D. Burley, Port Huron, Mich., and 2nd Lieut. Don Bryant of Montana.

They told their story upon their arrival here along with Flying Officer J. N. Cartwright, pilot of a British bomber which sighted and bombed their prison submarine.

Four German Divisions Put to Flight, 13,000 Slain

Soviets Roll Through 8 Miles of Nazi Defenses, Open Way Into Baltic States

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 18.—The 17-month-old German siege of Leningrad, Russia's second largest city, was lifted today by a triumphant Red army that blasted its way through 8 miles of solid Nazi defenses, killed 13,000 Germans and routed four divisions, a special Soviet communique announced tonight.

Breaking the blockade of Leningrad brings relief to three million persons and also releases the Nazi grip on the flow of Soviet armaments and other industrial facilities in the big city on the Gulf of Finland. Observers also foresaw a new turn in the entire war because Leningrad is a springboard for reconquest of the Baltic States.

This great news, announced in a Moscow broadcast heard here by the Soviet monitor, was a further damaging blow to German morale because Leningrad had been in a powerful Nazi vice since August 21, 1941.

Other Important Gains Claimed

"After seven days fighting the troops of the Volkhov and Leningrad fronts united on January 18 and so broke the blockade of Leningrad," said the communique.

But this wasn't the whole Russian story. Moscow announced important gains all along the snow-covered front, extending clear into the Caucasus.

Other Red armies gained in the advance on Kharkov, steel city in the Ukraine, with Russian vanguards less than 118 miles from that city.

Russian troops also fought their way into Kamensk, railway point only 85 miles north of Rostov, and poured across the Donets River below that city on the most feasible route toward Rostov, whose capture would bag all the Nazis in the Caucasus.

In the Caucasus they crossed the Manych River and seized Divnoye, rail terminal of a line that winds across the central area to Kropotkin on the Rostov-Baku Railway.

Big Nazi Fortress Captured

Schluesselburg, big Nazi fortress on the south shore of Lake Ladoga, about 25 miles east of Leningrad, was among a dozen localities stormed and captured by Russia's winter-hardened troops.

The Russians hit it from two directions, fighting their way through 14 milometers—8.6 miles—of mine fields, barbed wire, steel and concrete pillboxes. One Red column fought eastward from Leningrad along the west bank of the Neva River, and another struck west along Lake Ladoga, after crossing the Volkhov River.

Schluesselburg had been under sporadic Red army attack since the fall of 1941. By capturing it the Russians regained part of a railway running from Leningrad through Schluesselburg to connect with a line to Moscow and another

Army to Accept Enlistment of 17-Year-Olds

Wanting an army reserve of younger men, the War Department yesterday instructed recruiting boards to accept 17-year-old boys for enlistment in the Army and Air Corps enlisted reserve as aviation cadets.

They will not under any circumstances be called to active duty until they have reached their 18th birthdays, a department spokesman emphasized. Parents' consent is required for their enlistment.

The Navy and Marine Corps have been accepting men of 17, but the Army heretofore has made 18 its minimum. This regulation was changed so the Army could build up a younger reserve, it was said.

The boys will be called not later than six months after they become 18.

Russians Break Long Siege Of Leningrad

to Murmansk in the far north. Murmansk is the chef Arctic port for American and British supplies to Russia.

In their long unsuccessful effort to take Leningrad, the Germans have lost scores of thousands of men, the Russians said. Hitler ordered the city taken by storm in August, 1941, and the Germans hurled 300,000 men against it. The Nazi waves broke under stolc resistance directed by Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, but the siege has continued ever since.

The Russians have managed to fly supplies into the city and also open communications across Lake Ladoga—small boat convoys in the summer and railway tracks laid across the ice in winter.

Breaking through this bristling enemy belt, the Russians said, they captured more than 1260 prisoners and routed the 227th, 96th, 170th, and 61st Nazi infantry divisions as well as three regiments of other divisions.

In this week of savage fighting in piercing cold, the Russians said, their "god of war," the artillery, demolished 470 enemy fortified centers and dugouts, 25 strongly defended observation posts, and silenced 172 artillery and mortar batteries.

The break-through was carried out by Leningrad forces commanded by Col. Gen. Leonid Govorov, who was elevated to his present rank a few days ago and Volkhov front troops commanded by Gen. Kirkill A. Meretskov.

Coordination of operations on both fronts was credited to Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov and Marshal Voroshilov. Zhukov commanded the victorious central front Red army that fought west of Moscow a year ago, and also was in charge of operations during the early days during the early days of the Stalingrad offensive. He was made a marshal coincident with tonight's triumphant Leningrad bulletin.

Marshal Voroshilov commanded Leningrad's troops during the German siege until last December, 1941, when he was made commander of Soviet's Far Eastern forces.

Another general, N. N. Voronov, was made a marshal tonight, along with Zhukov, the Moscow announcement said. Voronov is an artillery specialist.

Ever since the early days of the German offensive in Russia in 1941, Nazi propogandists consistently have maintained that Leningrad was a "doomed city." The Germans even rushed American reporters to Finland in the early days of the siege, telling them they could enter the city with the Nazi armies.

Situation on Other Sectors

The situation on other sectors of the Russian front as announced by Moscow tonight was:

South of Voronezh: Russians fighting along the Voronezh-Kharkov railway have blockaded the town of Ostrogorzhsk, 25 miles northeast of captured Aleksyeevka. The number of prisoners on this front now has increased to 31,000, of which 22,000 are Hungarians, 7000 Italians and 2000 Germans.

Middle Don front: The Red army captured the railway station of Kamenk, 85 miles north of Rostov, and has fought its way into the city streets. Other units poured across the Donets River to menace Likhaya, to the south.

Lower Don: German troops still were fighting heavy defensive battles on the eastern approaches, 60 miles from Rostov.

Northern Caucasus: Nazi-held Salsk, 100 miles southeast of Rostov, was threatened.

North central Caucasus: Crossing the Manych River, in the Kalmyck Republic, the Russians occupied Divnoye.

Stalingrad: The remnant of 22 Nazi divisions trapped between the Don and Volga Rivers is being hit from all sides, and the Russians say it is only a matter of time until they are wiped out.

Madrid, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Reports reaching here from Bone, Allied base in Algeria, said tonight that Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc's Fighting French army of the Chad had driven to a point 80 miles south of Tripoli and was cooperating closely in the British Eighth Army's offensive in western Libya.

The Bone reports said Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has crossed the Tunisian frontier to Medinine and is expected to move on shortly to Tunis in evident preparation for withdrawing all his forces from Libya. Rommel is slated to take over the command of the Axis Tunisian army from Gen. Hans von Arnim, the reports asserted.

Dr. MacDonald's Comment on Decision

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, president of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, yesterday issued the following statement:

"Of course the decision handed down by the United States Supreme Court in our case comes as a keen disappointment. However, these are too critical times to dwell upon the result of a legal controversy which will have little meaning if we do not win the war in which we are now engaged.

"Conditions have changed greatly since the antitrust trial against organized medicine was initiated. No longer are we concerned with many of the problems and issues which seemed so important a few years ago. The medical society and its members are at present carrying a very heavy burden. Much of their labors are devoted to the war. One-fourth of its membership is in the armed services. Many others have volunteered for service in civilian defense, selective service and for other wartime work. In addition, the medical profession of this city, recognizing its obligation to provide adequate medical care for the civilian population, is making plans to meet any emergency which may arise.

"The people of Washington can be confident that the medical society will fulfill its responsibilities as the representative medical organization here. It will not lose sight of its objectives, which are the same as they have been for more than a century—to promote the science and art of medicine and protect the public health."

Servicemen Hurt In Crash on B. & M.

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 18 (INS).—Several persons were injured and 200 passengers, many of them servicemen, were shaken up when a five-car Boston & Maine passenger train crashed into a freight train today.

Three freight cars were demolished. Most of the injuries among the passengers were of a minor nature.

sale business selling intrastate are covered by the act solely because it makes its purchases interstate." The decision, by Justice Douglas, applied to the Jacksonville (Fla.) Paper, Co.

In a companion case involving Carr Brothers Co. of Portland, Me., Douglas pointed out that, unlike the Wagner Act, the Wage-Hour Act does not apply to employes in business "affecting" interstate commerce but only to those who deal with goods actually in interstate commerce.

The Supreme Curt also ruled yesterday that even though a person uses facts from a Government indictment in filing a suit to collect double damages and penalties from persons accused of defrauding the Government, the "informer is entitled to receive half of the amount recovered."

Justice Black delivered the 5-to-1 decision on litigation, based on an "informer" statute passed during the Civil War, in which "informers" sued the Electrical Contractors Association of Pittsburgh and members of the New Orleans chapter of the Associated General Contractors of America.

In other actions yesterday the Court:

Refused to review a decision holding constitutional Minnesota legislation imposing a 7 per cent gross earnings tax upon the property of freight line companies.

Upheld an Illinois Commerce Commission order which directed the Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis to operate caboose cars on its trains within Illinois and between Illinois and Missouri.

Refused to review a decision holding that a Federal District Court lacked jurisdiction to pass on a suit by a stockholder of the Electric Bond & Share Co. seeking to enjoin the Securities Commission from preventing the company purchasing its own preferred stock.

Refused to review the murder conviction of Wade Holley, in the Jefferson County (Georgia) Superior Court. He contended that his wife was improperly denied the right to testify in his favor.

Peace Guarantee Is 4-Power Task, Lord Halifax Says

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 18 (AP).—Lord Halifax said tonight that whatever form the future international structure takes "It is bound in the last resort to rest upon the capacity and willingness of the great powers to guarantee peace and order."

Terming this Nation, Soviet Russia, China and the British Commonwealth the four great powers, the British Ambassador to the United States, in a prepared address before the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, declared:

"We may none of us want this unenviable task, but unless we are prepared to shoulder it, we shall not rid the world of that insecurity which breeds war.

"And," he added, "unless we are prepared to shoulder it, we might as well say goodbye at once to any idea of men and women being able henceforth to live quietly in their homes. For, when law breakers are about, one policeman is worth a hundred good intentions."

Egyptian Ship Sunk In South Atlantic

The Navy announced yesterday that a small Egyptian merchant vessel was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine during the middle of December in the South Atlantic off the east coast of South America. Survivors have been landed at Miami.

The sinking increased to 594 the total of officially announced Allied and neutral losses in the western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor as recorded by the Associated Press.

mainly was confined to houses," a communique said. Ten of some 60 raiders were destroyed, four by one night fighter squadron, which set a new record.

London's millions were relieved to realize that the power of the Luftwaffe in western Europe had withered appreciably since the harrowing days of 1940-41.

At least 12 were killed in London, the hardest hit area being a row of two-story workers' apartments. One victim was a baby whose body was hurled 350 yards to the top of a three-story house.

Under a low cloud cover a strong force of Allied planes roared out over the Channel shortly before dusk today in the direction of Boulogne.

Heavy explosions were heard from France for some time afterward by watchers at Folkestone. Some buildings there shook.

British pilots said that the ground fire at Berlin apparently was no heavier than on Saturday night, but that the German defenses, particularly the night fighters, were helped by bright moonlight and a clear sky. The bombers had approached Berlin through clouds all across Europe the night before.

German accounts insisted that "disaster" befell the British planes and asserted that few reached the capital. The Berlin radio admitted, however, that fire damage was heavy and, significantly, termed the attack "a terror raid."

The Berlin radio said that 82 persons were killed in the two successive R. A. F. raids on Berlin, 50 of them prisoners of war.

While the opposing heavy bombers were hitting at Berlin and London, smaller Bostons, Whirlwinds and Hurricanes kept up a 13-hour patrol over parts of France, Belgium and Holland, shooting up railways, canal traffic and trucks.

The Germans, making their first serious incursion to London in 18 months, found the capital more heavily defended than ever before. Secret new antiaircraft devices were used and a veritable steel curtain was thrown up. Flashes from guns dulled out the moon and shrapnel clattered to the pavement like hail. Some Londoners were killed by shells which failed to explode aloft.

Rescue squads dug in the ruins of a row of small apartment houses for a missing child. The structures were crumbled by one of the largest bombs ever dropped in London, civil defense authorities said. A huge crater 80 feet wide was left and the adjacent buildings and streets were plastered with a 2-inch layer of sticky clay.

rially. With Guadalcanal cleared of the enemy, an offensive northward to clean out the Solomons altogether was thought possible.

Text of Navy communique No. 254 follows:

"South Pacific (all dates are east longitude):

"On January 15:

"During the evening, Flying Fortresses (Boeing B-17) dropped bombs in the Japanese-held Kahili area on Bougainville Island. Two large fires were observed after the attack.

"Later the same night, Catalina patrol bombers (Consolidated PBY) followed up the attack on Kahili and additional fires were started.

"During the same night Catalinas attacked enemy positions at Munda, on New Georgia Island.

"During this same night Flying Fortresses bombed Ballale Island in the Shortland area.

"On January 16:

"During the afternoon and evening Ballale Island was again attacked by Flying Fortresses and fires visible for 50 miles were started.

"United States ground troops on Guadalcanal Island continued mopping up pockets of enemy resistance. Approximately 150 Japanese were killed and a number taken prisoner. Their equipment was destroyed."

are recovering rapidly from their experience. Burley and Bryant received treatment for exposure and glass cuts. The Americans were airmen who had been forced down in Axis-held territory and were being taken to Italy.

"We were put aboard the submarine at Tripoli January 13," said Lieutenant Millechamp. "Without life preservers they put us in the forward torpedo compartment with a loaf of bread. We had two Italian soldiers as guards, but they never had been to sea before and got seasick. We had to take care of them.

"At 1:35 p. m. the following day there was a terrific bang which wrecked the inside of the submarine and blew out the lights. The Italians were panicked. They screamed and bumped into one another in a mad dash for the conning tower which was protruding above water though the deck was awash."

Lentz took up the story:

"All but three Italians got out on deck, then shut the hatch, locking the remaining three and ourselves in the sub. We stumbled in the dark to the officers' mess which had begun to fill with chlorine gas. There was a leak and the submarine began to sink. So the Italians on deck opened the hatch again to send down mechanics to stop the leak. We charged through that hatch in such a fury that the mechanics never got down."

One of the Britons, a major, had a pair of binoculars and saw a destroyer which he identified as British. He saw a flash which he first thought was a heliograph signal, but as the shell whizzed overhead he and the others quickly realized they were now an artillery target.

The Italians next hoisted a flag to the conning tower, but the Americans and British taking over from the excited crewmen made them take it down. They also had the two-deck cannon dismantled and thrown overboard as a further sign of surrender.

But the shells kept coming, and then the Italians jumped into the sea.

The submarine was sinking slowly and the Americans had to leave the deck also. Millechamp, clinging to the conning tower, was the last to jump into the water.

The Americans and Britons were in the water nearly two hours without life jackets. The Italians who had life preservers still were yelling and screaming and alternately praying, the Americans related.

But the British destroyer finally hove to and rescued all the men struggling in the water. Lentz was so exhausted he had to be pulled aboard.

Coal Strike Likely to End Tomorrow

500 workers in 13 collieries had decided to remain idle. Late figures were not available.)

Announcing the outcome to the miners, Carl Kratz, president of the south Wilkes-Barre local and one of a delegation of miners that trooped down to Washington last week to hear WLB order them back to work, declared:

"This is a legal election. The majority have voted to go back. We must abide by it."

He was greeted by mutterings of "We'll stay out anyway" and "We'll picket tomorrow."

Leaders of Lewis' organization had hoped that the decision by the South Wilkes-Barre local to go back might start a march back to work and end the strike. Two other large collieries also were slated to have voted yesterday, but a fourth large colliery stayed closed with an originally scheduled vote postponed.

The strike spread to Hazleton, Pa., for the second time yesterday with 2300 miners leaving two collieries in defiance of local leaders who stood at the mouths of the pits and urged the men to stay at work.

The strike began originally because of resentment over deduction of a 50-cent increase in dues which was ordered by the U. M. W.'s annual convention in October and removed from the men's pay under a checkoff arrangement.

The War Labor Board hearing revealed that the men were also irritated by failure to secure a $2 a day wage increase which they demanded.

Lewis deplored the miners' wage conditions at the hearing, but nevertheless ordered them back to work, saying that the time to get more money was in April when present contracts come up for renewal. As for dues, he told them only a constitutional convention of the U. M. W. could change the dues.

Walkout Denounced

Meanwhile, as WLB officials sought means to terminate the walkout, members of Congress denounced the walkout, calling for action ranging from prosecution to passage of legislation making wartime strikes a crime.

Representative Andresen (Republican) of Minnesota demanded that the Justice Department prosecute labor leaders in the Pennsylvania anthracite strike, telling the House "the outlaw strike borders on treason."

Legislation to make it a crime to strike or "foment a strike" in a defense plant in wartime was called for by Representative Luther Johnson (Democrat) of Texas.

"The American people are outraged, as they should be," he said, "by continuation of this strike on the home front while our boys are dying on the battle fronts."

Representative Colmer (Democrat) of Mississippi told the House "some action should be taken."

Glass Approved Use of Cars, But Wedding Guests Face Quiz

By the Associated Press

Garden City, N. J., Jan. 18.—Augustus B. Weller, Nassau County rationing administrator said today that owners of some 40 automobiles parked outside a church during a fashionable wedding here Saturday would be called in to explain why they drove to the ceremony.

The mother of the bride, however, said that Senator Carter Glass (D., Va.) had sent a telegram to her husband assuring him it was all right for guests to drive to the wedding.

Weller declared he ordered the license numbers taken during the wedding of the former Catherine Markham Adamson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vincent Adamson, to David Burritt Montgomery, of Hempstead, Long Island, and the United States Coast Guard. The ceremony took place at the Cathedral of the Incarnation here.

Weller said he had been instructed that driving to marriage ceremonies is "permitted only for persons necessary to the ceremony, according to religious customs, and only if alternate transportation is inadequate."

A check with State officials had produced no word contradicting this instruction, he said.

Mrs. Adamson today displayed a telegram she said her husband had received from Senator Glass. It said:

"The Office of Price Administration here has specifically ruled that a wedding is a religious ceremony and that use of autos to and from the ceremony is permissible. Any ruling to the contrary is in flagrant disregard of specific instructions of the national OPA."

Mayor George L. Hubbell said he also received a telegram signed by "Reutemann, secretary to Leonard W. Hall," United States Representative from the First New York District, which includes Nassau County, which said:

"OPA advises that wedding tomorrow at the Garden City Cathedral of the Incarnation is exempt from the pleasure driving rule and that full exemption runs to wedding participants and invited guests. State OPA office has been advised and local board can secure confirmation from them. This information is authoritative."

Nonheating Oil Rations Slashed 40%

Oil supplies to commercial, industrial and governmental establishments for other than heating purposes were slashed 40 per cent yesterday by joint action of the Office of Price Administration and the Petroleum Administration for War.

As a result, many nonwar businesses are expected to curtail their operations. Others probably will convert to coal and other fuels to maintain normal operations.

The slash was applied to all "nonheating" users, but the order contained a list of exemptions known as Schedule A. The order will take effect on February 2 and will apply to all supplies allotted for the first three months of this year. Consumers of less than 9000 gallons during the three months were not affected, however. The order affects the 17 Eastern shortage area States nad the District only.

Priority System Soon

A companion order setting up a complete system of priorities for fuel oil was expected to be issued jointly by the War Production Board and the Petroleum Administration for War in the near future. Under the order Ickes would serve as a WPB "requirements committee" for oil and would allocate it among various claimant agencies, just as WPB divides up other scarce materials.

A feature of the projected priorities order will be authority to allocate oil to the armed services as wel las civilians. Although oil will not be limited to the military, the services will be asked to state their requirements in advance to prevent the developmnt of unexpected withdrawals comparable to those that forced the recent temporary suspension of gasoline rations to passenger cars.

Although no estimates were available on the amount of fuel oil which would be saved by the 40 per cent horizontal slash on nonheating consumers, officials said it would be substantial.

Included on the list of exempt consumers (Schedule A) who will feel no slash are a large number of war industries, hospitals, food processors, transportation services, public utilities, communications services, including newspapers, telephone, telegraph and radio services, sanitation services, metal production, oil refining and rubber production.

Amusements Are Hit

No purely civilian enterprise, such as manufacturing of costume jewelry or cabinet work, was given exemption. Amusements which use large quantities of oil to operate machinery, such as ferris wheels, will also feel the slash.

Meanwhile, the District's fuel oil supply was replenished over the weekend, but with only enough to last distributors for two or three days. Continuing the "hand-to-mouth" program most dealers have had to adopt, the middle of the week will find Washington again facing one of its chronic crises which may, or may not, be averted, as was that over the weekend.

One major dealer received between 15 and 20 tank cars of oil, which gave him a stock of 150,000 to 200,000 gallons. But since his average daily sales run from 100,000 to 150,000 gallons, he estimates his cars will be empty by Wednesday, at the latest. Another dealer got 300,000 gallons over the weekend, and yet another, who had run dry Saturday noon, had over 20,000 gallons Monday and had been promised more today.

AFL Debates Kaiser Appeal To White House

Miami, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor's executive council debated today whether to ask President Roosevelt to intervene in National Labor Relations Board hearings affecting 65,000 workers in the Henry J. Kaiser shipyards at Portland, Oreg.

President William Green said a decision would be reached during the midwinter sessions of the council, which started here today.

The N. L. R. B. called the hearings on the complaint of the Congress of Industrial Organizations that there was collusion in the signing by the Kaiser Co. of closed shop agreements with A. F. L. unions.

In a statement issued as the 15-member executive council started its deliberations, the A. F. L. hit out again against drafting of labor and the freezing of men in their jobs.

The statement pledged that A. F. L. unions "will do everything in their power to fulfill and even to exceed America's war production goals for 1943."

High Army, Navy Officials to Be Called By Rules Group

By the Associated Press

High Army and Navy officials will be summoned before the House Rules Committee to explain why their departments authorized war contracts which, the House Naval and Military Committees charged, permitted huge fees and profits.

The Rules Committee's decision yesterday to hold the hearings followed reports by Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia and Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky of the House Naval and Military Committees, respectively, that investigations by their groups had produced savings of more than two billion dollars, chiefly through renegotiation of contracts.

Representative Fish (Republican) of New York, ranking Republican member of the Rules Committee, declared it was "obvious that somebody was sleeping and we want to know who it was and whether we shouldn't do something about it."

"Gross Neglect"

"There has been gross neglect somewhere and there is no telling how long it would have continued if House committees hadn't put a stop to it," Fish said.

The committee postponed, until completion of the hearings, action on Vinson's resolution to empower the two war committees to continue their inquiries. Committee members explained there was no opposition to such investigations but they felt the War and Navy Department officials should be given an opportunity to state their attitude on the contracts.

May and Vinson estimated their committees each had achieved savings of more than one billion dollars. May said "vast items of waste" were found in Army construction and Vinson reported that 121 sales engineers, or "war brokers," had received approximately 15 million dollars since 1939 by soliciting defense business from Government agencies.

Now Under Indictment

One of these engineers, described as a former Government employe whose salary never exceeded $4000, received approximately $600,000 in less than two years, Vinson said, adding:

"This gentleman is now under indictment as a result of evidence obtained by the committee and I am advised that the war funds division of the Department of Justice is preparing to obtain indictments against others, on the basis of evidence obtained by this committee."

Vinson also recommended closer cooperation between his committee and May's group by permitting the chairman, ranking majority member and the ranking minority member of each to serve on the other committee in an ex-officio capacity, and to vote on legislation related to the war effort.

U. S. Pharmacists Building Quinine Pool for Troops

A tremendous pool of quinine, critical drug cut off by the Japs, is being built here through donations of America's pharmacists under urgings of the War Production Board and the armed services.

It is for the fighting forces, some of which are in the world's worst malaria-infested areas — North Africa, the Solomon Islands, Burma, India and China.

First, the armed services appealed for the pool. Then Jesse Jones, Commerce Secretary, on recommendation of WPB Chairman Donald Nelson, appointed the American Pharmaceutical Association as Government agent in making the collection. The pool is established in the association's headquarters, 2215 Constitution Avenue.

Pharmacists contributing their quinine to the National Quinine Pool will receive a V-certificate in acknowledgment. The citation will say "We have contributed our stocks of quinine and related cinchona derivatives to the National Quinine Pool to be used to combat malaria among the armed forces fighting the Axis enemy in tropical areas."

'Expendable'

Best-Seller's Heroic Nurse Is Identified

LIEUT. BEULAH GREENWALT

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Jan. 18.—Peggy, that "fine, nervy girl" of the best-seller war book, "They Were Expendable," was identified today as Lieut. Beulah Greenwalt of the Army Nurse Corps.

Mrs. Jason R. King of St. Louis made the identification to the Post-Dispatch, explaining Lieutenant Greenwalt, whose gallant nursing on Bataan and Corregidor was eulogized by Author W. L. White and his naval narrators, was her sister.

Mrs. King said she had received from Lieut. Robert B. Kelly, second in command of the motor torpedo boat squadron which evacuated Gen. Douglas MacArthur from the Philippines, an identifying letter.

Lieutenant Kelly wrote Mrs. King that "Peggy is one of the grandest persons and one of the bravest I have ever known." The letter was dated last October 28.

Her fate after the fall of Corregidor still is obscure, although, in his letter to Mrs. King, Kelly mentioned that he had heard a list of American prisoners of war taken from a Japanese newspaperman contained the nurse's name.

Lieutenant Greenwalt is in her late 20s, the sister said. She studied nursing at Albuquerque, N. Mex. She joined the Army Nurse Corps about five years ago, going to the Philippines in June, 1941.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Samuel G. Greenwalt of Rolla, Mo. Her father died less than a month ago, asserting the only thing for which he wished to live was to hear his daughter tell of her experiences.

Most readers of "They Were Expendable" speculated chiefly about a possible romance between the nurse and Kelly.

Kelly related in the book how he sat despondently outside "The Rock" one night, thinking Peggy was at an Army party.

"Just then someone sat down beside me," he said. "I turned and it was Peggy.

"'Didn't you like the party?' I asked. 'I didn't go to the party,' she said. 'I thought it might be nice here.' That was the swellest thing that ever happened to me.'

Jap Rail Transit and Rolling Stock in Burma Hard-Hit in Series of Raids by Allied Airmen

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, Jan. 18.—Railroad yards, shops, mainline trackage and rolling stock in Japanese service at Maymyo, Burma, 35 miles northeast of Mandalay, were hard hit in a series of three week-end raids by United States medium bombers, an American communique said today.

The persistent thrusts at Japanese communications in that area follow the recent destruction of a span of the Myitnge Bridge across the Irrawaddy at Mandalay, which was reported to have severed traffic arteries between north and south Burma.

Following up an attack upon a Japanese convoy which left a 7000-ton vessel sinking and a 5000-tonner apparently damaged, heavy bombers cruised over the sea south of Rangoon Saturday, but with indifferent results.

All aircraft involved in the various operations returned safely.

In Chungking, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced that Bhamo, an advanced Japanese storage base in Burma, had been rendered virtually untenable by aerial bombing and strafing which destroyed or badly damaged warehouses, gasoline dumps, munitions and shipping. American medium bombers also showered tons of bombs on the Japanese base at Lashio.

From the Indian side, R. A. F. planes attacked Japanese positions at Rathedaung three times and in other parts of Burma damaged two small river steamers and other craft, a British communique said.

Hull Won't Comment On Hugh Grant Talk

Criticism of the State Department by Hugh Grant, former U. S. Minister to Thailand, drew from Secretary Hull yesterday the observation that he was not in the habit of engaging in controversy with those who once served in the department but who, for satisfactory reasons, no longer are included among its personnel.

This was Hull's response to a press conference request for comment on the Louisville speech in which Grant said the State Department was an antiquated institution badly in need of new blood.

Nazi Official, Accused Spy, to Quit Argentina

Buenos Aires, Jan. 18 (AP).—Germany notified Argentina today that Capt. Dietrich Niebuhr, Nazi naval and air attache accused of espionag which resulted in the sinking of several merchant ships in the Atlantic, would be withdrawn in compliance with an Argentine request.

The action followed a refusal by Germany to waive diplomatic immunity so the attache could be brought to trial before the Argentine Supreme Court.

Otto Meyne, German charge d'affaires, notified the foreign office of the Berlin decision, and said Niebuhr would leave on the first Spanish vessel available. He said the attache would need papers from both the British and United States governments to insure against the possibility of being picked up at sea.

Nazi Soldiers In Norway Fear Red Front Call

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

German soldiers in occupied Norway have not yet reached that point of moral deterioration pictured by John Steinbeck in "The Moon Is Down." In Oslo, Trondheim and other Norwegian cities, they still strut around as if they are masters of the world.

They do, that is, until they are ordered to the Russian Front. Contemplating this horror, they frequently kill themselves; or, in revolting against sailing orders, are killed by a firng squad.

Such is the story brought to Washington yesterday by Harald Land, 31, a Norwegian teacher and skier of note, who fled from Norway to Sweden when he learned that the Gestapo was on his trail.

In an interview at the Norwegian Embassy, Land said that distaste for the Russian front was particularly strong among the Austrian troops in Norway. He told of being at a Norwegian port when a force of Austrians was being shipped away to fight the Russians. They protested so strongly, he said, that many of them were shot. In the northern part of Norway, he said, there is a concentration camp for German soldiers who refused to go to the Eastern Front.

Land was doing underground work for the Royal Norwegian Government in Exile when he ran afoul of the Gestapo and was forced to flee. His bride-to-be followed him to Sweden, bridal veil and all, and they were married in Stockholm. Incidentally, Land told reporters that the people of Norway have a deep affection for the Royal Government in Exile.

Land said the Nazis' efforts to control Norwegian education had failed so dismally that they were forced to close all the schools last November. The official reason was "lack of fuel."

The real reason, Land said, was that Norwegian teachers and parents of school children refused to be regimented into the new order. The teachers refused to join the laerrersamband, a teachers' union set up by Vidkun Quisling. For their defiance, 1400 teachers were sent to a concentration camp and another 700 were sent to the Far North to work among the Russian prisoners quartered there.

Land said that the Quisling government had made extraordinary efforts to have Norwegian children join the Hitler jugend, an organization which would give them military training and teach them to play the role of spy at home. The campaign was a flop. The children simply would not turn out for the Hitler jugend, Land said, and as a result many parents were arrested.

Land, a teacher of languages and physical education, came here from London, which city he reached after a flight from Sweden. He will lecture in this country under the auspices of the United States Office of Education. His general theme will be the stand taken by Norwegian school teachers against the Nazis.

Land, who fought actively against the Germans throughout the Norwegian campaign of 1940, holds a commission as lieutenant in the Royal Norwegian Army and is now on leave. He is a graduate of the Norwegian Military Academy.

3-A Married Men In Essential Work Going Into 3-B

The War Manpower Commission revealed last night that all draft boards have been ordered to speed reclassification of married men with dependents from 3-A to 3-B if they are employed in any of the 35 essential industries.

Instructions sent to local boards by WMC's Selective Service Bureau referred only to "married men with children" but officials said reclassification would apply to all men in 3-A whether their dependency results solely from marriage, from wife and child or children, or by reason of collateral dependents.

Press and radio are included in the communications industry, which is one of the activities termed "essential" and men therein employed who now are in 3-A are to be put in 3-B.

Improved Gas Seen Revising Auto Models

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Rahway, N. J., Jan. 18.—Tremendously expanded production of 100 octane aviation gasoline, made possible by a new Esso "cracking" process developed since the war, will bring revolutionary changes in America's postwar automobiles, Standard Oil officials said here today.

A new plant employing the recently developed process was dedicated at the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey refinery this afternoon. The plant, utilizing Esso's new fluid catalytic cracking method, will greatly increase the Nation's output of vitally needed 100 octane gas for war purposes.

Dr. E. V. Murphree, vice president of the Standard Oil Development Co., told reporters that the powerful aviation fuel will undoubtedly supplant present motor gas after the war and result in radically different pleasure automobiles.

"Automobile engines now run about six pounds per horsepower compared to one pound per horsepower for aviation engines," he said. "Postwar automobile engines unquestionably will be much smaller."

Material reduction in the size of engines will make it possible for automotive manufacturers to alter greatly the interior of pleasure cars, Murphree forecast. Engines can be placed under the driver's seat or in the rear of the car, giving much more room for passengers.

Tresca Not Considered As Council's Leader

The Office of War Information said yesterday that Carlo Tresca was only one of many leaders of Italian-American organizations in the United States with whom the OWI had discussed the formation of a Victory Council of Italian-Americans, and that he was "in no sense" considered the leader of the council. Five days before Mr. Tresca was assassinated, he consulted about the proposed council with Ice Falk, associate chief of the OWI's Foreign Language Division.

Negro Leaders To Call on McNutt

A delegation of Negro labor, civic and church leaders will confer with War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt today on the immediate need for opening the postponed hearings on employment discrimination in the railroad industry by the Committee on Fair Employment Practice.

The committee has denounced the recent postponement as "a deplorable surrender to antidemocratic pressures and a negation of the important purpose for which FEPC was established."

Other steps to be taken by the group to insure continuance of the hearings as originally planned include communications with President Roosevelt and all members of the FEPC and distribution of leaflets urging mass action.

THOUSANDS OF WOMEN NOW KNOW
BOND BREAD SLICES EASIER

"Controlled Rising" is the secret

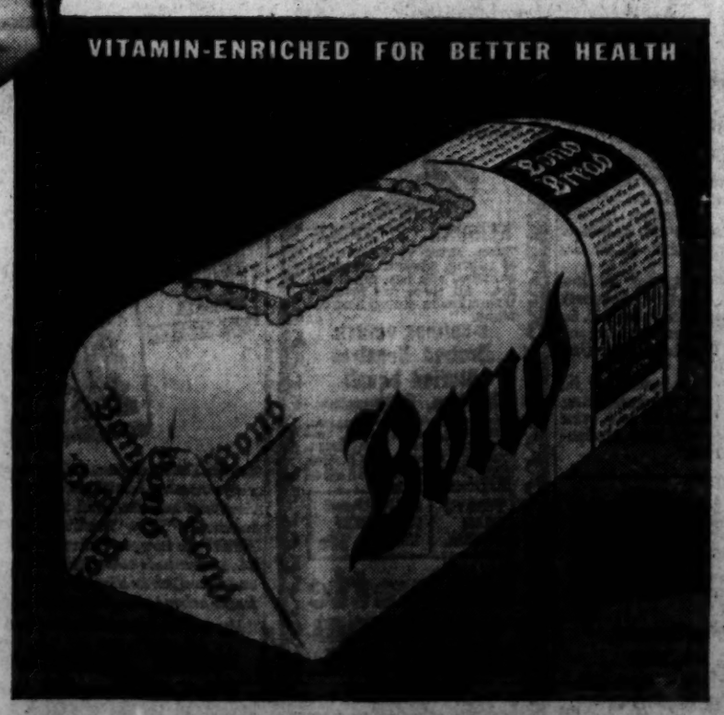
(A) Many breads are "puffed up"... allowed to rise too high in order to look larger (though the bread weighs the same). The result is flimsy texture. They are hard to slice.

(B) Bond Bread is never "puffed up". Every loaf is controlled to rise only to the perfect "flavor peak". Result: delicious taste and even texture that slices cleanly without tearing or crumbling.

VITAMIN-ENRICHED FOR BETTER HEALTH



THOUSANDS of housewives have switched to Bond Bread because they found it almost impossible to slice ordinary bread of flimsy, "puffed" texture. They have discovered that the smooth, even texture of Bond makes it far easier to slice.

Yes, you get a double advantage in Bond Bread. Buy Vitamin-Enriched Bond Bread today. It's not only fresher, finer-flavored bread, but it slices easier—thanks to the way it is baked.

Correct way to slice bread

Use a sharp knife. Lay the loaf on side. Slice from a bottom edge, with sawing motion.

Flynn Attack Called Anti-Roosevelt Plot

Democratic National Committee Elects Postmaster General as Chairman

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Democratic National Committee declared today that recent attacks on the appointment of Edward J. Flynn, retired committee chairman, as Minister to Australia were inspired by "enemies of President Roosevelt (who) dare not attack the commander in chief in the midst of a war."

These enemies, the committee said in a resolution indorsing Flynn, have been "implying deceit and evil motives on the part of the President in appointing a valued, capable and loyal friend to an important post."

Adoption of the resolution followed the unanimous election of Postmaster General Frank C. Walker as National Chairman to succeed Flynn.

Presented by Rivers

The resolution was presented by former Governor E. D. Rivers of Georgia and was adopted unanimously.

"Enemies of President Roosevelt daer not attack the commander in chief in the midst of a war," the resolution said. "They are seeking by indirection, subterfuge and chicanery to accomplish their purposes by a conspiracy of falsehood, detraction and vicious newspaper propaganda directed against the leader of the President's party during the past two years. * * *"

The committee contended Flynn was being assailed "simply as a cover to their efforts to discredit" the President and his party. It said that since this was the first time the committee had opportunity to act officially on the subject, it felt the American people should be advised "of the duplicity of the group that purposes to repeat with Franklin D. Roosevelt what they did by similar methods to another great President, Woodrow Wilson."

Only Nomination

Walker's nomination, the only one placed before the committee, was made by Culbert L. Olson, former Governor of California, who declared that under Walker's leadership "we can look forward to the 1944 battle with the reformation of our lines and with no recession from our social objectives."

The nomination was seconded by Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller of Pennsylvania, who asserted, "We're giving the President a strong right arm in Frank Walker."

Before retiring from the chammanship, Flynn told committee members he believed it was their counsel and influence "which made possible a continuance of our Democratic control in Congress when many of us doubted that such continuance of control was possible."

President Roosevelt, in a telegram to the committee, said: "I am sure that all the members join me in expression of gratitude to the retiring chairman, my old friend Ed Flynn, for all the services he has rendered not only in recent years as chairman but for many years before." The President referred to Walker as "another very old friend of mine—one who has worked long and intimately with me in the cause of sound, liberal government."

Eugene Casey, one of the assistants to President Roosevelt, spoke to the committee, calling those Washington officials who obstruct the President's objectives "the greatest curse we have today."

The committee passed a resolution commending his work as liaison man between the Administration and the State Democratic organizations.

"Bureaucracy," he declared, "does exist in Washington and all too many seem to forget they are there because the President put them there."

Walker accepted the national chairmanship in a brief talk before the committee and then outlined his views in a prepared radio address.

He said the party must not retreat from its stand for Social Security and must fight to establish the laws of human decency as the pillars of the social order of the postwar world.

After enumerating some of the Social Security measures enacted during President Roosevelt's Administration, Walker said the Democratic Party would continue to emphasize "the responsibility of Government for human security." He stated there must be "no interruption, no stepping back from the progress we have furthered."

He served notice that he was not in accord with proposals for a "breathing spell" after the last shot of the war.

"We will continue the war—not until we have reached an armistice—we will continue the war until we have established peace," he said. "If necessary, we will compel the peace of the freedoms by armed force; and we will maintain it by armed force because that peace is what we are fighting for. . . . The war will not be won until we give our enemies a bill of rights, national and international, and tell them they have no choice but to accept it."

FCC Investigation Approved By House Rules Committee

By the Associated Press

A resolution ordering an investigation of the Federal Communications Commission won unanimous approval of the House Rules Committee yesterday and was scheduled for formal House action today.

Sponsored by Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, long a critic of FCC Chairman James L. Fly, the study would be made by a five-man committee appointed by Speaker Rayburn and probably headed by Cox.

Cox declined to disclose what he expected to develop through the investigation, which he predicted the House would approve overwhelmingly, but Rules Committee members said the study would be "one of the hottest" ever undertaken on Capitol Hill.

Cox had sought approval of the resolution last year, when he asserted that Fly was undertaking to set up a censorship of all communications and had failed to divorce from the FCC personnel persons whose Americanism had been questioned by the Special House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Representative Sparkman (Democrat) Alabama, said he would move to broaden the investigation resolution to include the entire radio industry.

"Radio broadcasting vitally affects the public," Sparkman told the House. "If there is to be an investigation, we want one which will get into the basic issues in this most important field."

Sparkman said he wanted to find out "what the commission is doing" and how the radio industry itself operates.

"We want to know about the industry, an industry in which a few networks dominating the field make inordinate profits and in which the small independent stations in our rural sections are being forced to the wall," Sparkman declared.

The Alabaman suggested the investigation should undertake to disclose the extent of monopoly and control over sources of program material, whether there has been fairness in allotment of time for discussion of controversial issues, and whether complaints about the type of certain programs have been justified.

Senate Committee Favors Ousting of Tugwell

Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan said yesterday the Senate Territories Committee had voted 9 to 3 in favor of his bill to terminate the tenure of Rexford Guy Tugwell as Governor of Puerto Rico and limit the terms of future Governors to four years.

The committee also approved, Vandenberg said, a resolution by Senator Chavez (Democrat) of New Mexico to continue the life of a special committee, headed by Chavez, to investigate economic and social conditions in Puerto Rico. Expenditures would be limited to $25,000 under the resolution, which also must be approved by the Audit Committee.

The Vandenberg resolution, introduced after he had criticized Tugwell's administration of affairs in Puerto Rico, would terminate Tugwell's term upon enactment of the measure by Congress and its approval by the President.

In the past the Governors of Puerto Rico had held office at the discretion of the President, without a limitation on length of their terms. Vandenberg claimed this was contrary to conditions in other territories.

As introduced, Vandenberg's bill called for a term of two years, but he said the committee decided to change this to four years to conform with the organic acts of Hawaii, Alaska and the Virgin Islands.

The Puerto Rican Governor would continue to be appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate.

Another change in Vandenberg's bill, which he said he suggested himself, was to declare the office of Governor vacant 60 days after enactment of the bill, instead of "forthwith."

Meanwhile, Bolivar Pagan, Puerto Rican resident commissioner, introduced a bill for the election of the Governor by residents of the island.

Gov. O'Conor Cuts Maryland Budget

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18.—The effects of gasoline, automobile and tire rationing—and a reduced income tax—on Maryland's governmental operating expenses were apparent tonight when Governor O'Conor submitted the biennial budget for 1944-45 to State legislators during a joint session of the General Assembly, asking also that the fiscal year be changed to start next July 1 instead of October 1.

The Governor's budget, asking for $94,425,033 compared with the $107,709,640 appropriated by the Legislature for the 1942-43 fiscal years, was $13,284,608 less than its predecessor, mainly because an estimated $11,897,192 in gasoline taxes won't be available to maintain the State Police and State Roads Commission during the next two fiscal periods.

The Governor also announced that during the next two years 238 jobs would be eliminated because of wartime effects on various State agencies and departments. These eliminations, he said, would be made in departments hit hardest by war trends and rising costs.

Jitney Service

Everyone who rides the public conveyances in Washington must realize the urgency of supplementing their service as the city continues its mushroom growth and the use of private automobiles is further restricted. To extend streetcar lines is seemingly impossible, and new buses are very scarce. Yet much of the new housing for war workers is necessarily located in the city's outskirts. These houses must be occupied. Indeed, the housing situation is so tight that we cannot afford to lose a single dwelling of any sort in Washington and vicinity for want of transportation facilities.

How, then, is the problem to be met? Car-sharing has been only partially successful, and in any event arrangements of this sort do not assure efficient use of private automobiles. Nor has the multiple use of taxicabs brought any substantial relief to public vehicles operating on regular routes and schedules. As the emergency becomes more acute, we shall probably have to fall back upon passenger automobiles in one way or another. It is time for officials to be giving serious consideration to means of bringing this reserve of "rolling stock" into public use.

The most hopeful plan that has come to our attention is the operation of passenger cars on regular routes in outlying districts as feeders to the regular bus lines. Many individuals are now using their cars for this purpose. But they serve only their families and possibly a few neighbors. That is a wasteful use of both precious rubber and precious gasoline. Why couldn't a quasi-public agency be created to purchase cars—many are being put into storage, anyway—for operation as bus-line feeders during the rush hours of the morning and afternoon? Possibly they could be operated by volunteer women drivers, or by women drivers on small salaries, since the public would be expected to pay for such service.

Extension of bus lines could thus be avoided. In some cases bus lines might be shortened to permit speedier service in the more congested areas. Funds for the purchase of cars would have to be found, but this would not necessarily involve any ultimate loss, for some revenue would be forthcoming and the cars could be sold when the emergency is over. Means of integrating such a jitney service with the regular transit system would probably have to be worked out. Various other problems would have to be met. But there will be difficulties in any remedy that may be sought. The important consideration is to keep our transportation system from breaking down. And that will require imagination and willingness to experiment with the resources at hand to make sure that every essential worker gets to his job without too much wear and tear on his nerves.

Dream Gardening

The need for food this year is so great that the Department of Agriculture is appealing for Victory vegetable gardens everywhere, including city back yards. The only "if" in all cases is that the soil be tillable. That means that city dwellers may now know the delights of seed catalogue gardening—a pursuit that should be set aside for the first snowy, biting cold day. Then and then only do the tomatoes, radishes, carrots, beans and lettuce look their most luscious in the colored illustrations.

Anyone who has ever lived on a farm remembers how the drabness of midwinter was brightened by the arrival of the new seed catalogue with its vivid-colored pictures. It was pored over as if it were a best seller. The spectacular scarlet tomatoes brought gasps of esthetic pleasure—and no disturbing thoughts of the little green worms that might have to be picked off the vines. The golden carrots, the delicate green peas, the symmetrical pink rhubarb, all were beautiful and exciting hopes of the future, unmarred by any shadows of weed pulling and hoeing on torrid July days.

Seed catalogues this season, we are happy to report, have all their old, colorful idealistic allure. No pastel specialists are the artists who make their colored plates. Nor are they members of the realistic school. There is not an imperfect grain of corn in those rich yellow roasting ears, not a hint of a wilting leaf in those luxuriant heads of lettuce. The plushy maroon beets are perfect in contour, the velvety green cucumbers gracefully streamlined. The turnip, a nonglamorous vegetable if there ever was one, is done up in white and fashionable shades of purple. The carrots are more appetizing than they ever appear on anyone's table. Even the onion has oomph. While the radishes, always the delight and proud boast of city gardeners, are so appealing in their red succulence that you almost reach for the salt cellar.

But the triumph of the seed catalogue is the tomato. Huge, voluptuous and magnificently and unashamedly red, it dominates the page. After seeing the tomato, you automatically pick up the order blank in the catalogue. And that is the thing to do. Uncle Sam wants you to grow tomatoes—in addition to the green and yellow vegetables—so the juice may be canned for next winter. Yes, the seed catalogue is a great aid to patriotism.

Aimed At John L. Lewis

That many of the miners in the anthracite belt have decided to remain on strike and ignore the back-to-work order of the War Labor Board leaves the problem in President Roosevelt's lap. Doubtless he will himself send an appeal to the striking workers. And if, as a result of such a request, the miners do return to work, the problem underlying the strike may again be relegated to the background. In other words, we shall be enabled to get on with the war against dictatorship abroad and leave the war against dictatorship at home till a more convenient season. But this problem won't wait. It will continue like a running sore to poison our labor relations till Congress takes surgical action to uproot it. This is what the miners themselves seem to be asking. "I'd rather work under the soldiers," said Louis Novitsky, president of a local U. M. W. chapter at Tamaqua, Pa., "than under John L. Lewis."

Mr. Lewis, of course, is the dictator of the United Mine Workers of America. And the U. M. W. has a stranglehold on all coal labor, bituminous as well as anthracite. The Lewis dictatorship was rounded out by the successful effort a year ago to extend the union shop to the captive mines owned by the steel industry. The case came before the National Defense Mediation Board. Mr. Lewis lost by nine votes to the two cast by his friends on the board. Refusing to accept the award, Mr. Lewis called out the miners, and the President set up an ad hoc panel to adjudicate an issue that had already been settled. This agreed with Mr. Lewis, and Mr. Lewis then became dictator of coal labor throughout this country.

At that time the chief argument in favor of the Lewis contention was that the closed shop or any of its derivatives would insure union responsibility. It sounded plausible. A union shop frees the union officials from worrying about the retention of members and from proselytizing for members among nonunion labor. There is no further trouble about dues, either. Just as no man can be hired who is not a unionist, so the dues are deducted from the pay envelope, and remitted to union headquarters. Freed from these anxieties as to both membership and dues, ran the pro-Lewis argument, the union could give its full time to insuring 100 per cent cooperation of labor in the war effort.

Now we see how specious and how disingenuous is this argument. All that the captive mine decision did by buttressing the Lewis dictatorship was to make that dictatorship irresponsible. That is, of course, the way that all tyrannies degenerate. Among slave people they get away with it, but Mr. Lewis forgot that the American workers find Hitlerism just as obnoxious at home as abroad. That is why they have rebelled. The wildcat strike in the anthracite belt is a protest against the extra 50 cents a month in dues which John L. Lewis' union ordered last October and which the operators were contracted to collect. The demand for higher pay was an afterthought.

It is a tragedy that there should have been such a walkout in wartime. The glee at enemy propaganda headquarters in Berlin and Tokyo, which have lately been hard put to it for material, will be unrestrained. The walkout will be hailed as a sign of American disintegration. To be sure, the strike is a blow at our American unity and a setback to our war effort, but the cause is easily eradicable. Let Congress take action to break up these petty dictatorships in our midst by making the unions strictly responsible for their funds and actions. The people have long demanded such a housecleaning. The last Congress was willing to undertake it, but both people and legislature were prevented from insuring it by the pusillanimity of the Administration. Now the workers themselves are appealing for help. If the call is ignored, and the sore is patched over, the trouble is bound to break out again in even more virulent form.

Hoffman's Charges

It is becoming tiresome to rebut statements that are made on the floor of Congress from time to time in criticism of this newspaper for the part it played in bringing about the present conspiracy trial. But the truth deserves a place in the record of contemporary events side by side with the misstatements that our critics unload on the Congressional Record. Last Thursday, for instance, Representative Clare E. Hoffman, with a spicing of invective which we shall omit, declared: "Either Dillard Stokes [our reporter] wilfully, in reporting proceedings of the grand jury, lied, or he violated the rules governing grand jury proceedings, when on the 22d of January, 1942, in The Washington Post, he wrote, 'the prosecutors declared (George) Hill told the grand jury he recently received $12,000, but would not reveal the source.' Did the prosecutors, including (William Power) Maloney reveal to Stokes the secrets of the grand jury room? Either they did, or the truth is not in Stokes. If they did tell him what Hill said in the grand jury room, they as officers of the court should be haled before the court to answer a contempt charge."

Now here are the facts: The information that Representative Hoffman says must have been unlawfully obtained became public property in open court three months before the publication of the article quoted by the Representative. This was on October 25, 1941, when The Post reported that George Hill, secretary of Representative Hamilton Fish, was arraigned for perjury the day before, and that he tried to get his release on a bond of only $2000, pleading poverty. Resisting this move, Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney, in open court, told Justice T. Alan Goldsborough that: "Mr. Hill, by his own admission, has received at least $12,000 in cash within the past five months from sources that he will not disclose." It was before the grand jury that Maloney questioned Hill. Later it came out that Hill was getting money from the jailed Nazi agent, George Sylvester Viereck, who now faces trial for conspiracy. Hill is in prison for perjury. Enough said.

Russians Do It Again

By all odds the two most important single developments of Russia's counteroffensive are, first and foremost, the entrapment of the Axis forces at Stalingrad and, second, the recapture by the Red army of Schluesselberg.

There were 200,000 Axis troops in and around Stalingrad when the Red army closed its pincers. For a time these troops continued to be supplied by air. But as the Russians pressed on toward Rostov, thus widening the gap between the Axis forces at Stalingrad and the main German armies, and as German efforts to break through to the beleaguered garrison were thrown back, the fate of this garrison became progressively worse. Last week, in a special communique, the Russians said that fewer than a third of the original 200,000 Axis troops were left and that the remainder were in a pitiful plight. But at Hitler's insistance, a Russian demand that these troops surrender was turned down. So now they face annihilation. The impending conclusion of the Battle of Stalingrad will mark Russia's greatest victory and Hitler's most decisive defeat.

The whole Allied world has reason to rejoice over this tremendous development. But now, from the hitherto quiescent northern sector comes the inspiring news that Schluesselberg has been recaptured by the Russian army under Marshal Zhukov. So the siege of Leningrad, a siege which will be written large in the history of human fortitude, is also ending. In that siege well over a million Russians have lost their lives as a result of bombardment, starvation and disease. But the city has held out. Now what was left of the Nazi menace to the old Russian capital is in process of being eliminated, and far-reaching changes in a part of the Eastern Front many hundreds of miles removed from the Caucasus are also likely. The Red army has done it again.

Jujitsu Feint

Japan's failure during the past seven months to regain the initiative which it exercised almost without a challenge during the first part of the Pacific war has given rise in some quarters to the comforting belief that her defeat is not far off. Against such wishful thinking Joseph Grew, our former Ambassador to Japan, has repeatedly spoken out. He has now rendered another signal service to American understanding of our Far Eastern enemy by warning us that should they find they are losing the war, the Japanese will try to achieve by trickery what they cannot accomplish through strength. America and its allies, said Mr. Grew, should be forewarned "against the possibility of a jujitsu feint in the realm of diplomacy—namely a peace offensive."

Going into details on this matter, Mr. Grew suggested that when the going became very tough, the Japanese military leaders might bring forth from retirement some former statesman with a liberal label and background and place him at the head of a puppet civilian cabinet. Then, after we had been deceived by this maneuver into believing that Japan's jig was up, and that we could relax our guards, Japan would strike again. Such a maneuver would only be in line with time-honored Japanese habits. Jujitsu is a system in which an opponent's strength is used against him. The stronger we become, the more the balance of forces begins to weigh against the Japanese, the more we must be on our guard against losing by the enemy's cunning what we have gained through our own strength. Mr. Grew's warning is well-timed.

DARKNESS

All things touch
This flood, this braid
That fits
The tree, the stone, the blade,
The fallen leaf,
A lost corn-husk,
The broken spider's web,
The pale brook-stone—
All, all is dusk;
And the long door
Of the room of the sky
Shuts away this house.
We, too, have a door
That turns about.
And through it, the light

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX

No. 5

Credit For Dependents

A taxpayer is entitled to a credit for each person other than husband or wife, whether related to him or not, and whether living with him or not, who during the taxable year was dependent upon and received his chief support from the taxpayer, provided the dependent was either (a) under 18 years of age, or (b) incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective.

The credit for dependents is based upon actual financial dependency and not mere legal dependency. It is not necessary that the dependent be related to the taxpayer, but the taxpayer must have provided more than one-half of the support, or there is no dependency.

The term "mentally or physically defective" includes not only those who are mentally afflicted and physically crippled, but also persons who by reason of old age or impaired health, are incapable of self-support. The state of mental or physical defect need not be of a permanent nature, but if it existed for only a portion of the year, then the credit for dependent can be claimed only for that portion of the year during which the dependent was supported by the taxpayer.

A person may not acquire a credit for dependents by reason of support of a person qualifying as a dependent if, as a result of such support, he acquires a head of family exemption, but may acquire a credit for dependents by reason of additional persons qualifying as dependents, whom he supports. Thus, if a person claims head of family exemption on account of support of an aged mother or father, incapable of self-support, or a child, he would not be entitled to a credit for such dependent; but if he supported more than one such person he could claim credit for such additional persons provided they were under 18 years of age or incapable of self support.

Credit for dependents may not be divided between two persons filing separate returns, but must be taken by the one contributing the chief support. A credit for dependents may be claimed by a father who provides the support for his children living with his divorced wife, if the support is provided as the result of a court decree or as the result of an agreement between husband and wife.

The credit for a dependent, allowable to a taxpayer filing on Form 1040, is $350, and is proportionate with the number of months of dependency. Thus, for a child born on July 1, the credit allowable would be $175 (for six months), and if a child became 18 years of age on July 1, the credit allowable would be $175. One-half a month or less is not counted as a month; more than one-half a month is counted as a month in calculating the credit.

A credit of $385 for each dependent on July 1 of the year is allowable to a taxpayer using Simplified Form 1040A.

No. 6

Head Of Family

A single person, or a married person not living with husband or wife, is entitled to a personal exemption of $1200 for the year if he can qualify as head of a family. A head of family is "an individual who actually supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependent individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation."

Examples of head of family status would be a widower or widow who maintained a home for a dependent child, or a son who supported and maintained a household for a dependent father or mother. In order to meet the test of actual support and maintenance as head of a family, the benefactor must furnish more than one-half of the support and maintenance.

The term "in one household" ordinarily means under one roof, but if a father is absent on business or a child or other dependent is away at school, or on a visit, the common home being still maintained, the head of family exemption would still apply. Where a parent is obliged to maintain his dependent children with relatives or in a boarding house while he lives elsewhere, the additional exemption may still apply. If, however, without necessity, the dependent continuously makes his home elsewhere, his benefactor is not the head of a family irrespective of the question of support.

The term "closely connected by blood relationship" applies to a person's progenitors and lineal descendants, to his brothers and sisters, whether by the whole or half blood, and to his uncles, aunts, nephews, and nieces. Irrespective of any legal obligation of the taxpayer to support such dependent relatives, a moral obligation to do so exists, and if the individual is actually supporting and maintaining in one household relatives of this degree he is entitled to head of family exemption.

A taxpayer is considered to be "closely connected by marriage" with his stepsisters and stepbrothers, but whether his right to exercise family control and provide for these individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation must be decided upon the facts in the particular case. The same considerations apply to the status of a taxpayer because of support furnished to his father-in-law, mother-in-law, brother-in-law, and sister-in-law. First cousins by blood, and cousins of lesser degree, are not regarded as so "closely connected by blood relationship" as to give rise to a head of family exemption.

A legal guardian who may maintain and support in his home a dependent ward is not entitled to the personal exemption as head of a family if the ward was not connected with him by relationship of blood, marriage, or adoption; nor is a taxpayer entitled to exemption as head of a family by virtue of maintenance and support of a child not legally adopted.

Assault On Berlin

By Barnet Nover

The R. A. F.'s Raids And Their Timing

FOR SOME TIME the Nazi authorities have been engaged in a frantic effort to keep the facts regarding the military situation, particularly in Russia, hidden from the German people.

NOVEL

At first Dr. Goebbels employed just ordinary methods of concealment and obfuscation to achieve this end. Russian claims of progress in the Rzhev sector, along the Don bend and in the Caucasus were either blandly ignored or vociferously denied.

For instance, long after Velikie Luki had been captured by the Red army, the German people continued to be assured that this strong point was still in Nazi hands. Similarly, they were kept in complete ignorance regarding the desperate plight of the Axis forces in the Stalingrad area.

GOEBBELS was stalling for time. He was gambling on the hope that the tide which had set in on the Eastern Front would again be reversed, that the German army would soon retake Velikie Luki, relieve the troops trapped at Stalingrad and ease the pressure on other German-held key points in the Don and Caucasus sectors.

This did not happen. However, some inkling of the disaster that had befallen the Axis on the Eastern Front and in Africa, too, began to seep into Germany by way of foreign broadcasts. So Goebbels found it necessary to change his tack.

First he ordered a systematic jamming barrage kept up so that no foreign stations could be heard in the Reich. Then the Nazi press and radio began to issue veiled admissions regarding Russian gains.

At the same time the German people were warned by Goebbels and other Nazi spokesmen, no doubt in preparation for the release of more bad news, that they would be called upon to make far greater sacrifices than they had made in the past.

IT WAS AT this depressing juncture in German affairs that large numbers of British bombers arrived over Berlin to carry out the first R. A. F. raids on the Nazi capital since November, 1941.

From the viewpoint of their potential psychological effect the timing of the weekend raids on Berlin could hardly have been improved upon.

Up to last Saturday the people of Berlin, the administrative heart of Nazidom, could comfort themselves with the belief that no matter what happened to the German armies on distant fronts or to the people in the more exposed parts of the Reich, they, at least, were safe.

They believed, and there was substance to their belief, that Berlin was better guarded against air attack than almost any other city in the world, with the sole possible exception of Moscow. By way of proof there was the fact that the last British raid had resulted in a loss of 38 British bombers.

THIS COMPLACENT attitude regarding Berlin's air defenses appears to have been shared by the officials. For when Saturday night's raid occurred the R. A. F. met with singularly little opposition.

There was more opposition the following night, but by that time very considerable damage had been done to the German capital, which, in addition to being Germany's No. 1 political center, is also an industrial and transportation center of great importance

IT WAS INEVITABLE that Hitler would seek to retaliate for the assault on Berlin by an air attack on London. He had to do it for face-saving purposes at the very least. But it does not appear that Germany is in any position to give blow for blow in this battle of the skies.

During the past year the Luftwaffe has been steadily whittled down. German plane losses in Russia, in Africa and in western Europe have been considerable. German production of planes, once the greatest in the world by a wide margin, is now below Britain's and only a fraction of American production and ours is steadily on the increase.

In any campaign of aerial attrition, therefore, the Reich is face to face with the grim fact that even if her losses are no greater than those of her enemies her position will continue to deteriorate. To keep the balance anything like even Allied plane losses must be at least two and a half times her own. Yet, at the present time, the reverse is actually the case.

THE RAIDS on Berlin are a reminder to Germans that Hitler has deceived them again.

In a recent speech the Fuehrer justified the war in Russia by saying that by fighting in distant places Germany was at least keeping the war away from her own frontiers. The people of Berlin have now had it demonstrated to them, as the people of Cologne and Dusseldorf and Essen and other west German cities have learned to their sorrow, that Germany, too, is a battlefield of this war.

To make the German people realize this fact and at this particular juncture is not the least contribution which the R. A. F. is making. In the meantime German production is being hampered and the dead of Warsaw and Rotterdam, of Guernica and Barcelona and London and Coventry are being avenged.

Authority Given

One "Marie Furie" asks: "Who gave OPA authority to crack down on the A motorists?"

Answer—The authority was given by a seaman who died in agony in a welter of burning gasoline beside his tanker—torpedoed off Hatteras.

The authority was given by another seaman who thirsted and burned for endless days under the Caribbean sun in an open lifeboat—and then shipped out again on another tanker.

The authority was given by the driver of an ambulance in Tunisia and by the sons and brothers of those who lay wounded in that ambulance.

The authority was given by the cold and tired pilot of a patrol plane groping his way through the Aleutians. PETER DUNCAN.

Flynn Appointment

I agree with you heartily that Ed Flynn is an unfortunate choice for our diplomatic post in Australia.

If Mr. Flynn must be taken care of, I suggest that he be put some place where tact is not a requisite since he appears to have so little of this necessary diplomatic qualification as to make his appointment ludicrous. P. R. B.

Poolesville, Md., Jan. 12.

Americans want to feel proud of their representatives to foreign countries. Mr. Flynn has been exonerated of the charges against him in the "paving-block case," in so far as any violation of law is concerned; but his appointment comes at a time when the Governor of New York has been requested to reopen the case, and when the Governor has not yet had time to act upon that request. Americans generally can feel no pride in sending a representative to Australia under such circumstances.

Ruml Plan

In all the reports of discussions on the Ruml tax plan which I have read, I have not seen any comments as to how such a plan would affect men in the armed forces, or any estimate of the amount of revenue that would be forfeited by the Federal Government through the extension of the plan to this group.

In any consideration of the plan, serious thought will have to be given to the question of the liability of men now in the service who entered before January 1941, for the payment of taxes on income which they earned in the months prior to that date. Certainly if men who entered the service within the last 12 months are exempted from the payment of taxes on their 1942 incomes, soldiers, sailors and marines who have been in the service since 1940 and still owe taxes on income earned in 1940 and 1941 will demand—and rightfully so—that they receive a similar exemption. When it is realized that there are more than seven million men in the armed forces at present, with several million more still to be inducted, many of whom have outstanding tax bills, it will be seen that the adoption of the Ruml plan might very likely result in the forfeiture by the Federal Government of a sum as large as one billion dollars due from this group.

I submit that the enactment of the Ruml plan now, with a provision covering the tax debts of those men enlisted prior to January, 1941, is justified and will afford to our fighting men the mental relief which will flow from the knowledge that they are to return to a postwar world free of burdensome tax debts. Repudiated Appointees

Old Andy Jackson may have been right in his day, but now it's "To the vanquished to go the spoils." Just witness the scourge of appointments of politicians repudiated by their constituents. If your own people won't have you, then there's a plush seat waiting for you on the Federal payroll. What; you're not qualified—you don't know anything about the position? Never mind, that's not really important these days. You were defeated, weren't you?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

What Tax Is That?

What to do about the ten million new taxpayers, many of whom thought the new income tax was a rumor and who haven't put aside any dough to pay it March 15, is the question of the hour. Mention this tax to the average new victim and the response is, "Is it a joke?" or "Why wasn't I told?"

* * * *

We listened to a conversation on the new taxes today. It ran like this:

Are you all set on your income tax March 15?

It doesn't hit me, does it?

Don't you make over $625 a year?

Sure; what's the gag?

It's no gag. Everybody is in the income tax brackets this year.

There must be some mistake.

What makes you think so?

Why, er, it just don't seem right. I thought income taxes were just for the rich guys.

* * * *

Listen, on the level, didn't you put aside a cent last year for the new tax?

Me! I never gave it a thought. What's it all about?

Well, on your salary, you will have to pay $100. You can pay it in quarterly payments of $25, beginning in March.

I ain't ever been $25 ahead in March in my life. If I ain't got it I can't pay it.

Washington has arranged things so you can borrow the money from the United States Treasury.

You mean Uncle Sam will advance me $25 so I can pay him $25?

That's it.

That still leaves him out $25 in my book. Where's the sense in that?

He gets what you owe despite the fact you haven't got it.

Yeah, but when he gets through with the transaction he ain't got it either.

You don't understand modern economics. You pay 6 per cent on the loan.

So when June comes around I not only owe another $25 but interest on the last loan, yeh? And comes September I borrow again and owe more interest than ever? Yes?

That's it.

By that time the Government has given me $75 so I can pay it $75. Who's ahead so far?

Brooklyn.

And when the next December payment comes I'm still on first base wishing for a base hit, but tied to the bag with nobody up. Right?

Right. Unless Congress adopts the Ruml plan.

Rommel? I thought we had him surrounded in Egypt.

Kaiser Case

When your editorial "NLRB Mystery" speaks of the "smooth-running" arrangement between the A. F. of L. unions and Kaiser Shipbuilding Co. I am prompted to question The Post's knowledge of the facts in this case. The "mystery" referred to is the NLRB issuance of a complaint in which it is alleged that more than 700 available and qualified men had been turned away from employment by Kaiser because they were guilty of not being A. F. of L. members or because they had shown interest in C. I. O. organizations. An agreement made with a union which, it is claimed, does not represent any employes in one yard and represents employes in other yards only by virtue of company favoritism and assistance, and which prevents the tapping of the local manpower pool while at the same time prompting the company to reach across the country and to transport workers from New York, can hardly be called a "smooth-running" or desirable arrangement. Indeed, I find it impossible to justify your editorial statement of this morning with the position taken on this page several months ago attacking these same agreements which had impeded our building of Army cantonments.

Knowledge of these facts certainly makes obvious the answer to why the NLRB has scheduled a public hearing for the purpose of airing the contracts in the Kaiser yards. If "mystery" still prevails, it is easily dispelled by the many board and court decisions, including the Supreme Court, which have held it illegal under the Wagner Act for an employer to connive with a labor union—regardless of whether it be nationally affiliated with A. F. of L. or C. I. O. or independent—and enter an agreement with it so as to impose a particular organization upon employes without giving them an opportunity to choose a union of their own desire.

By scheduling a hearing in this case, the NLRB in effect is again serving notice on all three types of organizations and employers that such connivance between an employer and a labor union is illegal and will not be countenanced. I am sure that if the NLRB hearing shows that Kaiser's employes have had foisted upon them a union in whose choice they have no voice and have been compelled to maintain membership therein as a condition of employment, The Post would be among the foremost, as in the past, to assail such collusive agreements. Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

More Money But Less To Buy

WAR HAS suspended poverty—we cannot yet assume that it has been abolished—for an astonishing number of Americans. Most of those who are able to work have climbed right out of the bracket of the "ill-fed and ill-clothed." And the chief reason why they have not emerged from the category of the "ill-housed" is that housing cannot be built rapidly enough to meet demands. In spite of this deficiency, living standards for the "lowest one-third" have had an enormous boost.

PUSEY

In 1935-36 the incomes of families in the poorest one-third of the population ranged from $780 downward. Last week the President estimated that this figure had been raised to $1335 in 1942. Apparently the incomes of millions of workers formerly "ill-fed and ill-clothed" have come close to being doubled. Weekly payrolls have increased almost threefold since the war began in Europe.

The families of many unemployables who are living on relief and others with more or less fixed incomes may be worse off than they were a few years ago because of the 21 per cent rise in the cost of living since 1939. But these are the exceptions to the rule. The common complaint today is, "I'm making more money than I ever made before and there is nothing to spend it for." Use of the word "nothing," of course, is an exaggeration. Nevertheless, that much repeated statement reflects the worker's chief dissatisfaction with the new status he has achieved.

NOW THE PRESENT outlook is for smaller and smaller quantities of civilian goods that wage earners or anyone else will be able to buy. President Roosevelt said in his budget message that the armed forces and war plants will need about six million more workers in 1943. Many of them will probably come from civilian industries that have escaped conversion to date. Civilian consumption will be cut by about 25 per cent. That means less and less for the workman to buy with his expanding weekly earnings.

Everyone knows the chief reason why we can't satisfy all the wants of men with money in their pockets. Hitler and the Jap war lords have compelled us to devote more than half of our resources to the production of weapons and military equipment. On this score there is no complaint from labor. Men in factories are just as eager as anyone else to win the war. They will not suggest any encroachment upon the military program. But it seems to me that it is about time for them to investigate the other causes for the increasing shortages of civilian goods.

One of these causes is unquestionably the failure of men to work at anything approaching maximum capacity. Secretary Perkins says that war industries have generally worked 48 hours a week. This means that workers making civilian goods have worked far less than 48 hours, for the average in all manufacturing industries is 43.6. It is inconceivable to me that workers would prefer to spend only 40 or 42 hours on the job if that means a sharp reduction in their standard of living. And short hours in wartime means precisely that.

Other causes of our declining standard of living, despite the money in workers' pockets, are the time-wasting practices enforced by some labor unions. For example, when welders in war plants have to wait three or four hours for an electrician to change an electric cord plug from one opening to another, additional welders have to be hired for war work and fewer men are left to produce civilian goods. Indeed, wasteful use of labor anywhere in these days cuts right into the worker's own standard of living, because it reduces the supply of goods that he will be able to buy.

EXPERTS supervising the manufacture of weapons for the Army say that production in war plants could be stepped up by at least 25 per cent if time-wasting practices and arbitrary restrictions on output per man were eliminated. These handicaps to maximum production have long been denounced as a hindrance to the war effort. But have workmen realized that those practices, designed to spread the work when jobs were scarce, are now cutting directly into their own standard of living? The A. F. of L. seems to realize it; for in an editorial in the American Federationist it suggests that, instead of thinking of manpower in terms of numbers only, we "set about the problem of getting persons available to cooperate for capacity production."

Even the Government is now working its employes 48 hours a week and is making some effort to eliminate waste motion. But the President did not seize the opportunity which adoption of this policy afforded to ask for longer hours or the elimination of time-wasting devices in private industry. Instead, the Administration clings to the peacetime fetish of a 40-hour week after "business as usual" and "pleasure as usual" have gone by the board. Men are still being drawn from the farms—at the risk of a food shortage—so that men in factories may do less work than was considered normal in peacetime only a few years ago. We are asked to tighten our belts, but not to work harder or longer to avoid the necessity of tightening them.

I can't help thinking that wage earners will turn against this policy as soon as they see that it is cutting into their standard of living.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Plain Words About North Africa

OUR FORCES have now been in North Africa for more than two months, and the American people have yet to be given an objective account of any phase of the great enterprise. Even the story of the initial landings has never been allowed to come through the censorship in such a way as to give an intelligible picture of what happened at Casablanca, Oran, and Algiers. The critical and mysterious story of the first days in Tunisia, and what the local French authorities did or did not do when the Germans came in, has never been told. The political censorship has been no less impenetrable. The story of the arrangements with Admiral Darlan and with General Nogues has never been plainly told. There has been in regard to all the salient aspects of the enterprise almost no light.

LIPPMANN

There has been a general disposition among responsible people not to complain, on the contrary to assume that whatever the appearances, the situation would be worked out satisfactorily in the course of time. I myself still hope and believe it will be. But it must be said now that the self-restraint of those who were quite prepared to wait and see has been abused. To the military and political censorship which has prevented independent reporting of any phase of the situation there has been conjoined an inspired campaign in the press which, only thinly veiled, has made it appear that in the opinion of the State Department and of the War Department, General Eisenhower's military position is being undermined, and his army put in jeopardy, by the machinations of the British Foreign Office and of General de Gaulle and of those Americans who presumed to suggest—though they acknowledged the temporary necessity for it—that they were not happy at finding themselves in bad with the Vichy Frenchmen who are responsible for killing or wounding a thousand Americans, for selling out Indo-China to the Japanese, and for many other acts of treachery to our cause.

THIS PROPAGANDA campaign continues in spite of private representations which have been made by independent observers that it be disavowed, or or at least stopped, until the true situation in North Africa could be objectively reported, and then examined and discussed on its merits. It is now necessary to carry the case to the public judgment. For behind the curtain of the censorship and the barrage of propaganda, the authorities in North Africa are on the verge of an action which, if it is carried through, may make a difficult problem almost insoluble.

I refer to the importation into North Africa from the Argentine of a M. Peyrouton, a figure little known to Americans but very well known and fiercely distrusted because of his past record by French republicans of all parties and factions. This has raised the imminent prospect that General Giraud will with the consent of General Eisenhower and Mr. Murphy set up M. Peyrouton where he can dominate the French police and internal administration.

Now, however expedient it may have been to deal with the Vichy French already in North Africa when we landed, the deliberate summoning of M. Peyrouton from the Argentine is a horse of a wholly different color. When I say that this action is deplored even by Americans who have fully supported the State Department's Vichy policy, I am understating the position. When I say that it is opposed as undesirable and in the highest degree unwise even by Frenchmen who served Marshal Petain to the bitter end, I am stating a fact which will not be challenged because it could be quickly substantiated.

IT IS now necessary to examine candidly the cause of this political muddle in North Africa. It is due to bad judgment based on incorrect information received from our agents in France and in North Africa before the expedition landed. According to their information General Giraud was held to be capable of rallying the French authorities to our cause, and therefore of leaving General Eisenhower free to devote his attention to the military campaign against the Axis. The whole political plan based on this information broke down at the outset.

Thus it was not foreseen that in addition to commanding the United Nations forces, General Eisenhower would have to deal with the subtle and explosive complications of French imperial politics. Who last October ever imagined that in January he would have to decide whether M. Peyrouton should be established in a seat of power? What likelihood is there that General Eisenhower had ever heard of M. Peyrouton, much less knew his record? Yet that is the kind of burden we have placed on the shoulders of this brilliantly promising young American commander.

IT WAS placed there because our political agents misjudged the situation and the men with whom we were preparing to deal. Yet when General Eisenhower was confronted with a political problem which no one had prepared him for, his chief American adviser was the political agent, Mr. Robert Murphy, who had misjudged the situation.

Now anyone could have foreseen well in advance that General Eisenhower should not be burdened with political decisions that would tax the resources of the most experienced statesman. To show how evident that was to the merest casual observer, I venture to reprint a few lines I wrote after returning from England in September. When these lines were written I had seen some of the difficulties which he was struggling with in England in adjusting American troops to British conditions, and I urged the appointment of a civilian high commissioner of "the stature and caliber of Mr. Stimson or Mr. Myron Taylor" to help him out, and then went on to say that "General Eisenhower and his principal commanders have quite enough to do preparing our troops for battle . . . without asking them to deal with an ever-widening number of increasingly complex political and social questions." Yet getting on in England is child's play compared with North Africa.

MR. ROBERT MURPHY, who is the general's political adviser, has been attacked as Fascist-minded. Having known Mr. Murphy, I do not believe that. But having known him when he was counselor of our embassy in Paris just before the fall of France, and having seen him on a visit to this country after that, it has seemed to me astonishing that so much reliance has been placed on his judgment. For he is a most agreeable and ingratiating man whose warm heart causes him to form passionate personal and partisan attachments rather than cool and detached judgments.

In Paris in March, 1940, our embassy was passionately divided between the partisans of Daladier and the partisans of Reynaud. Mr. Murphy was an adherent and an advocate of Daladier, as passionate about it as if he were a Frenchman. A few months later, when poor Daladier had fallen and had been imprisoned by Marshal Petain, Mr. Murphy was almost as passionately an advocate of Marshal Petain. Knowing that he lacked detachment, and how readily he took his political color from those he associated with, it was hard to feel confidence in his ability to guide General Eisenhower in dealing with the complex personalities of North Africa.

That, too, has been the main trouble with our Vichy policy—not that the policy itself was wrong but that a policy of that kind, which involved dealing with a collection of the greatest double-crossers in Europe, was to such a critical extent in the hands of naive and gullible men.

THE TIME has come to cease misleading the American public by pretending that the political situation in North Africa, which is our entire responsibility, is muddled because of what has been said about it and thought about it in London. That is just an unsportsmanlike search for a scapegoat, and altogether unworthy of a great people. The control of this situation is in Washington and nowhere else, and it is in Washington that the crucial decisions will have to be made, and the measures taken, to send to North Africa American political representation of sufficient stature and caliber to cope with the problem.

William H. Hastie, Civilian Aide to Stimson, Resigns

The resignation of William H. Hastie, Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of War, was disclosed yesterday. Hastie declined to say why he was resigning or what he expected to do.

After thanking the press for its cooperation he said in a statement, "I shall have no further or amplifying statement to make until after my official duties shall have terminated" at the end of this month.

Hastie was born in 1904 at Knoxville, Tenn., and is a graduate of Amherst College and the Harvard Law School. He has been on leave as dean of the Howard University Law School here since he joined Secretary Stimson's staff November 1, 1940, as an adviser on Negro affairs. Hastie was Federal judge in the Virgin Islands from 1937 to 1939.

Hastie said that his assistant, Truman K. Gibson, jr., and Louis Lautier, administrative assistant in charge of matters affecting Negro civilian personnel, would remain on duty.

EVERYONE is going to have to carry a lot of extra packages this year: tremendously higher Income Taxes, the 5% Victory Tax, War Bonds, and a rising cost of living. Most people are going to have to carry 2-ton loads on 1½-ton trucks. And it is going to be an uphill haul over a rough road.

A business-like budget is therefore more important than ever. Only by working out a careful and orderly arrangement for your personal financial affairs . . . just as the experienced truck operator does in putting a capacity load of packages on his truck . . . will you be able to make the grade.

So figure up exactly how much it will take to pay what you owe now and the things that will be coming due in the next twelve months . . . taxes, bills, and insurance premiums. Then, for whatever help you need in setting up a business-like plan for meeting your obligations, come to "The Bank for the Individual." It may be that a bank loan, to be repaid over a convenient number of months, would help distribute the load to best advantage for you and level out the bumps in the road ahead.

For the past 18 years, The Morris Plan Bank of Washington has specialized in serving men and women as individuals. In most instances, no endorsers or collateral are required on loans to husbands and wives, home owners, executives, department heads, administrative employees, or anyone else of similar financial capacity and good credit standing in the community.

More than 50,000 Washington men and women already look to this bank for down-to-earth help and guidance in the wartime business of living . . . because this bank has their best interests at heart . . . and they know it. It means a lot to them in keeping their personal financial affairs in order. It can mean a lot to you in increasing your carrying-capacity as a citizen at a time when all America is all-out to win. Mid-Court Shot With Seconds to Go Beats Hoyas

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The good burghers of Boston who set up an awful howling when Joe Gordon, not their Ted Williams, was voted the most valuable player in the American League, are undoubtedly appeased now. The New York Baseball Writers Association has just conferred on Williams the high-sounding title of The Player of the Year.

POVICH

That ought to dispose of Boston's threat to secede from the Union following the go-by given their .356-hitting outfielder and league batting champion last month. That was when Gordon was named the league's most valuable player by a Nation-wide committee of baseball writers. Boston couldn't understand it.

The Boston folks charged that New York writers had railroaded Gordon's nomination through the committee even as, a year before, the Yankees' Joe DiMaggio was named the most valuable player in preference to Williams, who hit .406 and outbatted DiMag by 40-odd points. Boston was getting irked by the succession of awards to Yankees.

It was an empty accusation by the Boston people, inasmuch as each city in the league is represented by only two votes in the most valuable player poll, and New York couldn't outvote anybody. It is also a blunt fact that in the balloting which named Gordon, Williams didn't even get the most valuable player votes from his own city. The Boston committeemen cast their votes for Shortstop Johnny Pesky, Williams' teammate.

Since losing the official league valuable player award to Gordon, Williams has made up some ground by winning the Sporting News' valuable player award which, for Boston, removed some of the sting. Resentment that Gordon, the goat of the World Series, had won the official award over Williams, still lingered, however.

The New York Baseball Writers, who will honor Williams at their annual dinner on February 7, have apparently made their own position clear in the most valuable player voting. They didn't choose Yankee Gordon for The Player of the Year award. The New Yorkers might have chosen Williams for the latest award with their tongues in their cheeks, though. Could be.

Because the New York award is always made at the annual dinner in New York, in person to the recipient who is the honored guest, Williams will be there. Arrangements have been made to get him a pass from the Naval Pre-Flight School at Amherst College, not so far distant from New York. If they had voted for Gordon, it would have posed the problem (and the expense) of bringing him all the way across country from his Oregon home in these troubled ODT times. The nomination of Williams as Player of the Year may not only have been the most logical choice of the New York writers, but the most convenient, as well.

As one of the guys who originally voted for Gordon over Williams for the most valuable player award, we still aren't offering any apologies. Williams outhit Gordon by 40-odd points and led the league in runs-driven in, runs scored and batting, but Gordon is still our man as the league's most valuable player. With him the Yanks won the pennant. Without him, the Yanks wouldn't have won. The Red Sox couldn't win it with Williams.

Gordon's value to the Yankees can't be judged strictly on any set of figures, although a second baseman of his type who bats .300 is no drawback to a club generally speaking. But Gordon was so far ahead of all other second basemen defensively that the mere fielding figures are an injustice to the follow. They don't take into account his supersensational plays which meant no more in the fielding averages than Joe Blow's routine throw to first base after taking a ground ball on one big, luscious hop.

In everything but batting, Gordon makes a show of Williams in any comparison of the pair. Williams is a mediocre outfielder; Gordon is the best-fielding second baseman the game ever produced. Williams is slow on the bases, Gordon is a flash. Williams' throwing is only ordinary, Gordon's is superb. Williams sulks on occasions, Gordon is a fiery competitor all the time.

That's how it is.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 18.—War, rationing and the gloomy threat of horsemeat and scrambled eggs replacing ham-and-eggs isn't frightening Matt Winn, octogenarian promoter of America's gaudiest and best-loved race, the Kentucky Derby.

CONSIDINE

The bourbon-drinking old sportsman announces here and now that he is going through with plans to hold the sixty-ninth running of his classic—he saw the first one in 1875 from a neighboring treetop and has promoted the last 40 of them—on May 1.

Not only that but he won't reduce its value, as the Wideners reduced the value of the now extinct Widener Handicap. The Derby of 1943 will again be a $75,000 race, as it has been since 1940.

Old Matt says, through the medium of his publicity man, Frank Menke, that he doesn't expect the race to attract nearly as many persons as it has in past years, "when attendance estimates ranged between 80,000 and 100,000."

He expects that the crowd this year will be made up chiefly of betters from Louisville proper and the neighboring horse counties. The home-breds were there in previous years, of course, but they were inundated by the flood of carnival visitors to Churchill Downs from practically every State in the Union (and in many States of repair). In the good days it wasn't unusual for ticket reservations to come in from Canada, Cuba, South America, Europe, British Isles and even Australia.

We've needled the elderly colonel a few times in the past for harboring the heart of a small loan banker beneath his rubicund rind. But there's no doubting his sincerity when he says, "The Derby has never lapsed; it has been running annually for 68 years and my fondest hope is that nothing will interrupt it. I am eager that the Derby continue as an annual race so long as I live . . . It has been run year after year despite wars, depressions and catastrophies of different kind. It has endured and become steeped in tradition, where other races either have been abandoned, or slipped into certain obscurity."

One can't knock old Matt for plugging his own baby, for the Derby was a cheap race for many years until he began jumping its purses during the first World War. Derby winners, to Matt, are the only worthwhile American thoroughbreds. There was something wonderful about the way the old guy beamed over the victory scored by War Admiral, son of Man o' War, in 1937. "He's the spittin' image of Ben Brush," Winn enthused, dipping 40 years back into War Admiral's ancestry to pick out a Derby winner, and wholly ignoring Man o' War—whose owner, Sam Riddle, selected the Preakness of 1920 and snubbed the 1920 Derby as "Big Red's" debut as a 3-year-old.

Winn has some choice pickings for his 1943 gallop, if horse vans don't come under the pleasure driving ban. Count Fleet, for example, holder of the new world's 2-year-old record for the mile. And Occupation, winner of the Belmont Futurity; the filly Askmenow and a few others.

Matt's concern over the dizzy drop in the size of the crowd might be settled, of course, by announcing for the first time the actual attendance at the race. The 80,000, 90,000 and 100,000 figures have always been guesses for, like the Indianapolis Speedway Race, the boys in the press coops were never supplied anything in the way of attendance figures except an "estimate"—estimated by press agents who weren't exactly out to make their tub-thumping look bad.

We winced a little when we read, at the start of the Winn-Menke announcement: "Col. Matt J. Winn's full faith in the future of the United States was made evident when he announced that the money added by Churchill Downs for the sixtieth running, etc., etc." We're not sure that the perpetuation of a bread-winning race by a racing corporation headed by Winn has anything to do with the future of the United States. There is an outside chance, we'd say, that the United States might somehow muddle through even if the Derby had to skip a year.

But it's good to have the classic canter going on as scheduled, and Matt still around to play host and murmur "tsk, tsk," when the boys from the poorer papers griped because the Louisville hotels wanted and got $20 a night for linen closets. He's an institution in American sports and so is the Derby, on which more money probably is bet than on the world series and any other big race combined. The war measures that keep the stews out of Louisville on May 1 may have a healthy effect on the Derby, for it promises to become again what the frill-ignoring hard-set country always thought it was: A dam' fine hoss race for the spring.

Latsios Takes Clean Verdict from Torres

Alexandrian Is Too Tough For Little Joe

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Nick Latsios, Alexandria's Golden Greek, last night successfully cleared the biggest fistic hurdle to date in his brief professional career by punching his way to a clean-cut, undeniable decision over rough, tough little Joe Torres, of Puerto Rico in eight rounds at Turner's Arena.

The 1853 fans who came by streetcar, bus and shank's mare to pay a net gate of $1,859.40, one of the most satisfying turnouts of the year, saw the Alexandrian take every round but the fourth and at no time left the issue in doubt.

Torres pursued the same body punching tactics that only two weeks ago enabled him to knock out another local boy, Charley Petro. But Nick proved a much tougher boy than Petro, and, unlike Charley, took it all without visible ill-effect.

Nick in Danger Once

Only once was Nick in danger. That was in the fourth round when Joe uncorked a beautiful left hook that tore its way into Latsios' midsection. But the Alexandrian staggered briefly, kept his head and worked his way out of a dangerous spot.

As early as the first, Nick went to work on Joe and had him in a bad way. But Torres, rich in ring cunning, weathered the storm. Again in the fifth, and once again in the sixth, Nick was throwing punches that were finding their mark with crucifying consistency on Torres face. But Nick, even had he that much in reserve to put Torres down, craftily continued to rely on a jabbing left and was content to take the duke rather than risk everything on the possibility of a knockout.

It was Nick's eighth straight victory as a professional and his most important. Torres weighed 145½ and Nick, 147½.

Stribling Scores

Ken Stribling, 155, Washington Negro and a recent bridegroom, said farewell to the ring before going into the Army next week, with a decisive eight-round victory over Manuel Rosa, 154, Baltimore, in a bout that packed action all the way.

The popular Ken landed all the harder and cleaner punches and earned the decision despite a chorus of booes. Ken took command at the opening bell, and except for a few brief moments in the fifth round when Rosa unloosed a two-fisted attack that required all his wiles to get by without too much damage, was ahead throughout.

At the conclusion of the fifth, Rosa's best round, the Baltimore boy suffered a slight cut eye, but was given the green light by Dr. W. F. Greaney.

Clent Conway, 181½, New York, scored a six-round kayo over King Kong, 196, Baltimore, in the semi-windup. The end came at 1:20 of the sixth with the burlesquing Kong taking a ripping left to the chin which sat him down in Conway's corner.

Roy Lewis, 134, transplanted Muncie (Ind.) scrapper, kayoed one Joey Terry, 138, of Baltimore, in 1:15 of the first round with a left to the tummy. Jimmy Phillips, 136, Baltimore, outslugged Bernie Cady, 135½, former D. C. Golden Glover, to win a 6-round decision all the way.

Callura Beats Wilson for Feather Title

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Jan. 18.—Jackie Callura, a wild-swinging little Canadian whose fighting style combines all the best features of a bull and a kangaroo, won the National Boxing Association version of the world featherweight championship tonight by outpointing Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson in 15 rounds in the Providence Arena.

A 5 to 4 underdog in the betting, the charging little clouter from Hamilton, Ontario, climbed all over Wilson from start to finish, and although punished considerably in the infighting, he slammed the Pittsburgh Negro with wild wallops that seemed to start in nearby Pawtucket.

He was content to land about one tenth of all the punches he let go, but for the last half of the fight, he was so busy trying to avoid Callura's awkward rushes he didn't have much time to toss thumps himself.

On the Associated Press score card, Callura won eight rounds; Wilson, five and two were even. The decision of Referee Tim Ferrick and Judges Jack Finnell and Edward Jansen was unanimous, and drew a roar of applause from a hughly-partisan crowd of 5920 paid fans and more than a thousand others.

Mount Rainier Ahead

Mount Rainier Boys' Club "A" and "B" teams defeated Hyattsville in a Prince Georges' Country Police Boys' Club League doubleheader last night in the Mount's gym, the reserves winning, 31-28, and the regulars 45-41 in two extra periods.

Central Threatened By Rider Five Today

Double Bill Opens Heavy School Schedule; Eastern Favored Over Anacostia Quintet

Two of the three teams which share the interhigh basketball lead—Central and Eastern—go under fire today as the heaviest schedule of the season is launched with an afternoon double-header at Tech gym.

Starting at 4 o'clock, Central's Vikings will get a rigid test against Roosevelt, and a highly favored Eastern five meets Anacostia. The third leader, Tech, waits until Friday night for its only action against Wilson on the same bill that includes an Anacostia-Coolidge battle. Saturday night a third double bill pits Roosevelt against Western and Central against Eastern.

Keen observers of the annual series expect Roosevelt to take today's feature. This despite the fact the Riders have won only one of their two games while Central was romping off with two straight. The Riders have a faster club, however, as evidenced in an overtime loss to Tech, and figure to have a slight edge on a smoother floor game.

The schedule:

TODAY
Central-Roosevelt at Tech, 4 p. m.
Eastern-Anacostia at Tech, 5:15.
Wilson-Bethesda at American U., 4.
Blair at Coolidge, 3:45.
Bullis at Georgetown Prep, 4 p. m.

Having Trouble With Golf Game? Listen to MacFarlane

Former Open Champion Gives a Few Pointers On How to Keep Form

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 18.—Does the gas ban keep you from the golm course?

Then wham away in your own living room, advises Willie MacFarlane, former Open champion, now winter professional at Miami Shores course here.

Afraid lack of practice will spoil your timing and follow-through?

Walk around with a golf club in your hand, says the genial Scot. It's the feel of the stick, not the actual swing, that counts.

That living room golf he advocates really works. He demonstrated by smashing a few against the wall of the clubhouse lounge, and he didn't pull his punch. Try it yourself—with a felt ball, of course.

The only hazard, Mac says, is your wife's concern for her rug.

Follow these suggestions—they're lots of fun anyway—and your golf game won't suffer from acarditis, according to MacFarlane.

"Golf was here a long time before automobiles, and there's no reason why it can't go back to horse and buggy days—with a few modern wrinkles," he declared.

MacFarlane believes in adapting the sport to conditions. He has an answer to everything—even the golf ball shortage.

He has hired a professional diver to retrieve balls from the five water hazards. The diver fishes out an average of 200 a working day for Mac's precious store.

Card-Terror Game Delayed Until Feb. 1

By the Associated Press

Westminster, Md., Jan. 18.—Western Maryland's Mason-Dixon Conference basketball game with Catholic University, scheduled for Tuesday night, has been postponed to February 1, Lieut. Bruce Ferguson, Western Maryland coach, announced today.

Ferguson said the same was postponed because of midyear examinations at the Washington school. A new date for the game will be set later.

Postponement of the Catholic University game leaves the Green Terrors, current coholders of first place in the Mason-Dixon Conference with Randolph-Macon, with only one scheduled game this week. The Terrors meet Washington College Saturday night.

A scheduled game with Aberdeen Proving Ground Wednesday night was cancelled earlier because of transportation difficulties.

Frank Suffern, 6-foot-2-inch forward and second high scorer of the team, was reported recovering from a back injury which benched him in the game with Delaware last week, and Ferguson said he would be able to play in the Washington game.

Captain Bobby Retains Links Touch, Bags 67

By the Associated Press

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 17.—Capt. Robert T. Jones, the old master of golf, showed today that army life was good for his game.

Playing Indian Creek course here for the first time, with strange clubs, "Bobby" shot a 67—5 under par.

Jones is here on army business. He played in a foursome that included James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio; Brig. Gen. Arnold Krogstad, commanding general of the Fifth District Army Air Forces technical training command, and Chick Evans, who ruled the golf world 25 years ago.

Joe DiMaggio Reported Ready To Enter Air Corps

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 18.—Joe DiMaggio is headed for the Army Air Corps' ground crew, a letter from Scout Devine to Edward G. Barrow, president of the New York Yankees, indicated today.

Devine said DiMaggio intended to join the service shortly at the Santa Ana, Calif., base, which is an Army Air Corps Replacement Center.

DiMaggio recently reached a reconciliation with his wife after she had established residence at Reno, Nev., preparatory to filing for a divorce, but the star Yankee outfielder announced at that time he intended to enlist.

Temple Wins, 52-51, With Last Basket

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Five frantic youngsters who lost their heads and forgot how to freeze a ball in the final moments of a hectic ball game cost Georgetown its first collegiate defeat of the season last night at Tech High School, a 52-51 loss to Temple.

Georgetown lost its chances to beat the visiting Owls in the 3 or 4 minutes which preceded those last maddening 60 seconds but at that it took a midcourt shot by Temple's Jack McLaughlin with less than 10 seconds to play to win the game. McLaughlin's shot, with Hoyas waving their arms all around him and the crowd roaring in his ears, swished through the cords with hardly a ripple and Temple was home.

Danny Kraus took the ball outside for Georgetown and shot a short pass to Billy Hassett who was standing under his own basket—and shot—but the ball bounded off the top of the Georgetown backboard and the timer sadly blew the horn to sound a Georgetown defeat to nearly 2000 fans.

Hoyas Are Careless

The Hoyas had the game in their hands at 49-46 but they insisted on crazy passes, wild dribbling and inexperienced ball-handling with only precious seconds to go. Danny Gabbianelli, somewhat of a hero with 7 points in a sub's role, let the ball get away from him twice when Coach Elmer Ripley and the Georgetown students were yelling "hold it, hold it, hold it."

Temple won the game because McLaughlin, who came into the game in the first period after Ed Kosta left with a broken nose, held a hot hand and tossed in 19 points, including the winning ones.

The Hoyas insisted on allowing McLaughlin and Nelson Bobb to shoot, practically unguarded, and as a result the Owl sharpshooters accounted for 35 of the team's 52 points.

The slow-starting Hoyas spotted Temple the first eight points of the ball game, but Andy Kostecka and Danny Kraus started pushing in their respective specialties and at the 15-minute mark of the first half Georgetown pulled into a 14-14 tie on Meigs Reilly's foul shot. Kraus, dribbling through the entire Temple club and laying up two-pointers, helped the Hoyas to a 22-18 half-time lead.

McLaughlin Stars

Enter McLaughlin's hot hand at the outset of the second half, however, and as Georgetown practically joined the spectators in admiring Mac's shooting the big fellow tossed in seven straight points and gave Temple a 25-22 lead.

The ballgame see-sawed with each team matching baskets until Big John Mahnken, who more than met his match under the basket, in the agressive Owls, pushed the Hoyas into a 30-37 lead. They were careless with it, however, and Temple came back to take another short lead, Georgetown regained it on Gabbianelli's fancy shooting, one basket finding the cords while Danny was looking the other way, running at top speed and tossed the ball over his head.

Bobb stole the ball to give Temple a 50-49 eadge and then Mahnken came up with a beautiful play and lay-up for 57-50. The final gun was expected at any moment but not until McLaughlin's long shot from the mid-court scramble.

Kilrea Holds Scoring Lead In American

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 18.—Hershey's Walter Kilrea again topped the American League hockey scoring during the past week with 57 points, an increase of four over the preceding weekly period, statistics released from headquarters here today revealed.

The sharp-shooting Kilrea accounted for 21 goals, one more than a week ago, and 36 assists, three more than in the previous period.

Ab Demarco of Providence retained second place with 53 points, 32 of them assists and 21 goals, a gain of 5 points.

Les Cunningham of Cleveland had 6 points in third place—15 goals and 31 assists, same as the week before and tied with Norm Mann of Pittsburgh.

The "bad man" still was Buck Jones of Providence with 73 minutes in the penalty box.

Long, Freeman Meet On Wrestling Card

Two of the most popular boys operating in the East—Johnny Long of Baltimore and Ace Freeman of Milwaukee—were matched yesterday for a special 30-minute bout on tomorrow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

They will grapple in support of the feature attraction between the Yellow Mask, mysterious hooded grappler, and Ernie Dusek of Nebraska.

Tide's Eddie Vaughan Closes Career Today

Eddie Vaughan, one of the fastest men on Eastern High's interhigh basketball contenders, will play his last game with the Tide today when it meets Anacostia at Tech gym. Nineteen years old last week, the former Western athlete enlisted in the Navy yesterday and will report to Bainbridge, Md., on Saturday.

Kanzler Quits As Production Head of WPB

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson yesterday announced his acceptance of the resignation of Ernest Kanzler as director general for operations of the War Production Board on grounds of ill health.

Curtis E. Calder, a member of the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange and president of the American & Foreign Power Co., has been picked to succeed Kanzler with formal announcement expected sometime today, it was learned.

Resignation of Kanzler marks the departure of a man who was Nelson's first major appointment—to head the automotive branch last January. Kanzler supervised conversion of the giant auto industry to war production.

Informed WPB officials regard Kanzler's departure as signs of changing times at WPB. It was reported that Kanzler has felt that he no longer had significant policy-making scope under the new setup, with principal authority lodged with Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson and Ferdinand Eberstadt.

Kanzler was also reported disappointed with the controlled materials plan fostered by Eberstadt on the ground that it failed to make adequate use of the materials distribution machinery of the auto industry.

Other WPB officials who have departed after lines of authority were routed around them include Vice Chairman James Knowlson who lost control of materials to Eberstadt and A. I. Henderson who was deputy director general for operations.

In a letter to Kanzler accepting his resignation, Nelson said that "When you return, which I hope will be soon, I have an important assignment for you.

"Since I first asked you to come to Washington you have been asked to do many difficult jobs and face many problems and have always fulfilled them to my entire satisfaction, and in doing so you have made a considerable contribution to the war effort."

Pounds Haight To Try for Role In 'Ice-Capades'

"Ice-Capades of 1943" proudly announce the signing of Walter Dewey Haight, correspondent of The Washington Post's sports columns, to a full-fledged trial with the ice extravaganza at a rehearsal set for Uline Arena today at 2:15 p. m.

Haight has been recommended to the production as a talented chap whose appearance would add considerable weight to the show.

Walter Dewey will break the ice (figuratively, we hope) as an "Ice-Capader" during rehearsal today, and will be presented (either as a member of the cast or spectator) for tonight's War Bond opening at 8:30.

Haight, in a sincere desire to cooperate with the war effort, will board an unsuspecting streetcar en route to Uline Arena. Several ambulances will be available for the return trip.

Colonials Leave For Army Game

George Washington University courtmen will leave this afternoon for New York for their annual game with Army at West Point tomorrow afternoon.

The Colonials will take a four-game winning streak against the Cadets, who have lost to Columbia and beaten Williams in two starts.

The only game locally tomorrow finds Georgetown host to Loyola of Baltimore, the Mason Dixon Conference champions.

Although Catholic U. canceled tonight's scheduled game with Western Maryland the Cards will go through with their weekend dates, Gallaudet at Roosevelt High on Friday and 1301st Service Unit of Cumberland on Saturday in the C. U. gym.

Appley Made Executive Head of WMC

Lawrence A. Appley, on leave of absence from a vice presidency of Vick Chemical Co., yesterday was appointed executive director of the War Manpower Commission.

The New Yorker, who less than three weeks ago had been appointed director of WMC's Bureau of Placement, will have "complete administrative authority over staff services, planning and operations of the agency," WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt said.

Appley will work on a contract basis giving him compensation for his expenses, but not a salary, McNutt said. Because of this, McNutt, said, the appointment will not require confirmation of the Senate as do all WMC appointments paying more than $4500 a year.

Later, a spokesman for McNutt explained that Appley would be on a "work without compensation basis," receiving $10 a day living allowance plus traveling expenses. The spokesman added that Senate confirmation of Appley would have been unnecessary even if he were receiving a salary because Appley's job was set up in the original appropriation which did not require confirmation for top jobs.

Appley served as special assistant to the Secretary of War on civilian personnel before joining WMC. He will take over duties that Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming has executed as acting executive director since December 5. Flemming will continue to hold membership on the Manpower Commission.

A graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, Appley was educational director for Socony-Vacuum for 11 years. He is now vice president of the American Management Association.

Robert T. Morris Dies at Home Here At Age of 44

Robert T. Morris, 44, secretary of the R. P. Andrews Paper Co., died unexpectedly Sunday at his home, 3337 Alabama Avenue Southeast. He had been employed by the company for the past 24 years.

Mr. Morris, who attended St. Dominic's School, served in the Marine Corps during World War I.

Surviving are his wife, Elizabeth M., his son, Robert Joseph, 8, and his mother, Katherine E.; three brothers, Joseph R. of Texas, William R., John V., and a sister, Mrs. Katherine Broaddun, all of Washington. Funeral arrangements are yet to be announced.

Lt. Jared L. Simms Dies in Auto Crash In Oklahoma

Second Lieut. Jared Leotis Simms, 26, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Simms of 1412 Euclid Street Northwest, was killed in an automobile accident outside Oklahoma City, Okla., early yesterday, his parents have been notified.

Lieutenant Simms, a member of the Army Air Corps, enlisted in June, 1940, and received his training at several camps, including the officers' candidate training school at Miami, Fla., before being assigned to duty as an instructor in the Oklahoma A. and M. College.

Requiem Mass Celebrated for M. J. Hennessey

High requiem mass was celebrated yesterday in St. Martin's Church for Michael J. Hennessey, 76, retired letter carrier, who died Friday at his home, 38 U Street Northwest. Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Hennessey, Washington resident for 71 years, was in the Marine Corps from 1872 to 1878, later becoming a mail carrier until his retirement 11 years ago. Afterward he was a gate keeper at Griffith Stadium.

John E. Furlong's Funeral Services To Be in Denver

Funeral services for John E. Furlong, 44, prominent Colorado highway engineer, who had been assistant director of the Highway Advisory Committee to the War Department for the past nine months, will be held in Denver this week, probably Thursday, Federal Works Information announced yesterday.

Mr. Furlong, who lived at 2013 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, died at Garfield Hospital Friday night following a week's illness.

Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Reckord, Wife of General

Funeral services for Mrs. Bessie Roe Reckord, 59, wife of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Third Service Command, will be held tomorrow in Baltimore, where the general is stationed.

Mrs. Reckord died in Walter Reed Hospital Sunday. She had been a patient there since the middle of December and underwent an operation last August.

and D Streets Southeast, but none of those summoned there appeared before the boar...

Bender's case was reported by Policeman F. J. Rowen, of the Ninth Precinct, who filed a written complaint in which he said:

"About 1:30 a. m. I saw the above man (Phillip F. Bender having previous...) been named together with his address and the licence 59-756, in company with two other men and three women, walk from in front of Kavako's beer parlor, at Eighth and H Streets Northeast, to the above car which was parked in the middle of the 700 block of Eighth Street Northeast. They drove from there with lights turned off until they turned right on H Street. About 2:05 a. m. saw them drive up in front of the Little Tavern at 720 H Street Northeast.

"Driver's explanation: Stated he was working 11 hours a day and has to have some fun."

An OPA inspector reported that on January 8 he had seen Mary C. Fitzgerald's car parked two blocks from a bowling alley. Another reported that on the same night he had seen Simmons' car parked at 1749 L Street Northwest, near the Mayflower.

Vlahos, who lost six coupons, was reported to have parked his car near a theater in Silver Spring, Md., on January 8. He told the board he had gone to Indian Spring Club to repair a pin ball machine and had stopped to go to the theater on his way home.

Browand was said to have parked his car near White Horse Inn in Brentwood. He explained that he had gone to a house at 4533 Buchanan Street, Hyattsville, where he installed some insulation, as a private undertaking of his own. On his way home he said he had stopped at the White Horse for a sandwich and cup of coffee.

The board temporarily confiscated both his and Vlahos' ration books but informed them they would be told shortly of the action by the board.

John L. Graham, 1240 Raum Street Northeast, an employe of the District sewer division, explained that he had parked his car at the Rustic Cabins, in Maryland, to get a bite of food. He had gone into the area in an effort to secure a nurse for his wife and newly born son. He was on his way home when he stopped for food. The board dismissed the case against him.

Confolo's car is said to have been found parked at The Crossroads night club and Boyd's found parked on Rhode Island Avenue. From a broken window and steering wheel, Boyd's car was at first thought to have been stolen.

Spending Control Bill Introduced

on appropriation bills calling for expenditure of billions, largely because money bills originate in the House and the Senate has little time to study them before expiration of the fiscal year.

Nye called attention to the "overwhelming" increase in Federal personnel and predicted that the joint committee, at an estimated expenditure of $60,000, would save the country millions of dollars a year.

War Effort Revitalizing, Bankers Told

The war effort has had a revitalizing force on American business and industry which will remain in the peace to come, members of the District of Columbia Bankers Association were told last night at their annual meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Five beneficial developments resulting from the present conflict were listed by David A. Weir, assistant executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, who was one of the principal speakers Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, also spoke but "off the record."

Among the benefits of the war effort, Mr. Weir listed an improvement in efficiency of business methods, a greater degree of economic self-sufficiency, renewed reliance on progress through expanded production and more equitable distribution, realization that social reform must go hand in hand with economic progress, and a revitalization of the whole tax structure

More World-Minded U S.

It should be self-evident to everyone that when this war is ended, Mr. Weir said, we will participate in world affairs more than we ever have before, adding that "we accept that obligation. At the same time I believe that the American people will insist that this participation shall be accompanied by a growth of our own economic and military strength.

"We shall in many ways be more self-sufficient in both a military and economic way than we have been for a century. Our participation in world affairs and our part in world rehabilitation can and should, therefore, be based upon what is right for us to do rather than upon a basis of military or economic necessity"

Discussing inflation, Mr Weir said that "we should fight inflation both during the war and after the war. However, in our emphasis upon the dangers of the disease of inflation we should not allow our measures of prevention to kill the patient.

Some Regimentation Needed

"We shall probably need some regimentation, perhaps even some price-fixing and rationing for a short period of time after the war is ended That period, however, should be short After the brief time necessary for conversion of war industries to peacetime production we will be in position to produce more extensively and more efficiently than ever before. We will also have an unprecedented demand for all types of goods.

"In our anti-inflation efforts we should be careful not to destroy the prosperity which can and should come from enabling American industry to meet these demands for commodities. This will mean an emphasis upon increasing peacetime production, upon handling our Government fiscal affairs in such a way that the tax dollar is not wasted, upon providing increased purchasing power through enabling industry to keep its wheels moving in accord with the great demand for goods. This demand will come both at home and abroad. . . ."

Bank Officers Honored

The meeting was held in honor of the presidents of Washington banks among whom the following were in attendance: Corcoran Thom, Thomas J. Groom, Clarence F. Burton, H. H. McKee, E. C. Graham, M. F. Calnan, Floyd E. Davis, Lanier P. McLachlen, Linwood P. Harrell, C. H. Pope, Bruce Baird, Robert V. Fleming, Francis G. Addison, jr., Ord Preston, T. Howard Duckett.

Sidney F. Taliaferro, second vice president of the association, was in charge of last night's meeting while John A. Reilly, president of the group, presided. Appointment of Stanley D. Willis, trust officer of the National Metropolitan Bank, as general convention chairman for this year, was announced.

Waring's Pennsylvanians, Loretta Young Join List

Will Add Luster to Birthday Celebrations; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

ON TOP of New York's roundabout boast that Xavier Cugat and his orchestra, now on the stage at Loew's Capitol and to inaugurate the new Statler Hotel at the end of the month, also will play the President's birthday celebrations, comes official announcement from the entertainment committee having the local observances in charge that Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians have accepted the committee's invitation to participate in the gala events.

This will be in the nature of a homecoming. Not only have Fred and his cohorts taken part in previous birthday celebrations, but much of the Pennsylvanians' early celebrity was acquired in the Capital when the illustrious organization was just trying its wings. The band numbered 14 at the time. Including instrumentalists, choir and specialists, it now runs up to five or six times that total of personnel. Fred will be bringing his whole troupe down for the birthday—Donna Dae, Two Bees and a Honey, "Poley" McClintock, the frog-voiced percussionist, and all the rest. Quite an expansion since Fred and the Pennsylvanians rendered invaluable service as the star act on the first broadcast ever put on the air by the Crandall Saturday Nighters, over Station WRC, 'way back there in 1924 or '25, or whenever it was.

Equally exciting is the simultaneous announcement by the committee that Loretta Young has been added to the list of Hollywood stars who will make the junket to Washington in the interests of the fight against infantile paralysis. Having only recently completed work in Paramount's production of "China," Miss Young will derive a multiplied thrill from being present on the thirtieth. In private life, she is the wife of Lieut. Col. Tom Lewis of the Special Services Branch of the War Department, stationed in Washington in charge of all overseas radio programs. And that is by no means all. Additional stars are being rapidly rounded up and will be announced as speedily as final arrangements for their presence can be completed. That could be almost daily from now until the big event.

The Newsstands Are Being Cheated

For a long time now it has been preying on what sneaks by as our mind that something ought to be said right out in meeting about the handsomest monthly publication that finds it way to the drama desks. It is the de luxe, plate-paper, monthly book gotten out by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the title of "The Lion's Roar." Leo roars very elegantly and, it must be said, almost always has something to roar about. The book itself would be justification enough. It is a hefty job of about the page dimensions of the largest of the standard magazines and twice as thick. It is illustrated with fine-screen halftones of the pick of the photographers' crop of "stills" and line and color drawings by top-flight artists. The December issue deals elaborately with such releases as "Random Harvest," "Stand By for Action," "Keeper of the Flame," the next for Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy; "DuBarry Was a Lady," "Tennessee Johnson," "Andy Hardy's Double Life," "Whistling in Dixie," "Journey for Margaret" and such short subjects as Saroyan's "Good Job" and Pete Smith's "Marines in the Making." The book would sell for 50 cents on any man's newstand. With a skimpy net profit of only $12,133,294 for 1942, after taxes, one wonders how the hard-pressed Loew-M-G-M outfit can afford it!

And that reminds me. Two of the current short subjects are unusually exciting and informative. One is that aforementioned Pete Smith "Marines in the Making;" the other, Warner Brothers' "The Fighting Engineers," in Technicolor. If you want to know what makes the Marines so tough, Pete Smith will tell and show you. And if you want to know how they get there and back, the "Engineers" will attend to that. This latter business, incidentally, was made down at Fort Belvoir and is a real eye-opener.

Hurry! Hurry!! Hurry!!!

With bond sales of between $750,000 and $1,000,000 assured, according to last word from the Variety Club and Station WRC, cosponsoring the premiere, a small final allotment of war bonds, entitling the purchasers to free seats for the opening performance of the "Ice-Capades of 1943," at Uline's Arena tonight, will be placed on sale at the WRC Bond Booth, Fourteenth Street and New York Avenue, between 10 a. m. and noon today. Vera Hruba, five-time skating champion of Czecho-Slovakia, and red-headed Donna Atwood, 1942 national junior figure skating champion, not only will auction the bonds, but reward the purchasers with kisses—which surely ought to sell out the house. After tonight, of course, the show will do that on its own account.

Precisely as everybody knew would happen, the crowds storming the Earle Theater to see Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in "Road to Morocco," the most deliriously lunatic laugh hit of their careers—or anybody else's—are so great and so greedy that doors today and tomorrow will open at 10 a. m., with the first screening at 10:30. Anyone wishing to get in had best set his alarm clock ahead an hour or so.

Signs-of-the-Times Note

Oscar Elder, one of The Post's sports correspondents, was struck the other night by the significance of the double-barreled admonition on the marquee of a picture house in Arlington, Va.:

"YOU CAN'T ESCAPE FOREVER"
"BUY A BOND TONIGHT"

C. AUBREY SMITH AND GRACE GEORGE
as they appear in the genial roles of the Halstead Carters in the Isabel Leighton-Bertram Bloch comedy, "Spring Again," which last night opened a single week's engagement in the National Theater. This is their first costellar venture in 32 years and the first appearance of either on a Washington stage in many seasons

It's 'Spring Again,' at National, Gay, Sparkling and Delightful!

By Nelson B. Bell

"SPRING AGAIN," Guthrie McClintic presents the three-act comedy by Isabel Leighton and Bertram Bloch. Staged by Mr. McClintic; setting by Donald Oenslager. At the National Theater.

THE CAST

Halstead Carter.....C. Aubrey Smith

Millicent Cornish.....Joyce Cotter
Tom Cornish.....Donald Murphy
Robert Reynolds.....Ben Le Bland
By Lionel Carter.....Douglas Gregory
Joe Crumb.....Tom Wenning
L. J. O'Connor.....Edmon Ryan
Western Union Boy.....Dick Briggs
William Auchinschloss.....Michael Rosenberg
Arnold Greaves.....Lucian Bell

In this day of a world gone mad, a comedy of such delightful humor and enveloping charm as "Spring Again" is as refreshing as the recurrence of the verdant season its title celebrates. Especially so when intrusted to the facile talents of two such distinguished and disarming artists as the bubblingly gay Grace George and the transparently glowering C. Aubrey Smith. It has been long since Washington has enjoyed a more enchanting evening in the theater than was afforded it last night in the National by this perfect concert of play and players.

As remote from the depressing spirit of the times as Easter from Halloween, "Spring Again" deals lightly and lucidly with the graciously comic aspects of the complications that beset the elderly lives of the Halstead Carters, their daughter and their granddaughter. Their simple domestic problems become important only to the degree that they threaten the legendary magnificence in both character and deed of the proud Mr. Carter's warrior father, easily the greatest hero of the Civil War to his son. Affronts to the old general's dignity and renown come early and often—usually from the patient Mrs. Nell Carter's rebellion against permitting her own life to be snuffed out by his memory. On these occasions, Mr. Carter is accustomed to leave home in one of his higher dudgeons, until his daughter, on whose pension he subsists, compels his return to the slowly cooling family hearth.

The high crisis in the lives of all the Carters comes when the resourceful wife and mother dramatizes the life of the old warhorse for the radio as a first aid to her grandson-in-law, who is having romantic difficulties with the proud young beauty of the third generation. Through the seemingly greatest barrier of all to the peace of the Carter household—the disclosure of the idol's feet of clay—is deftly and joyously brought about the dissipation of all their misunderstandings and the threats to the happiness of three bickering married couples who "lived happily ever after."

Amusingly involved in this readjustment of personal relationships are the formulation of an advertising campaign for the ancient whisky that must have been the brand President Lincoln recommended to his generals—with its handsome emoluments to the Carter endorsers—the great popular success of the sacreligious and revealing radio plays and the inevitable attempt of Hollywood to buy the picture rights to the series. From these ingredients Isabel Leighton and Bertram Bloch have concocted one of the season's tastiest delicacies, served with genial grace by Producer-Director Guthrie McClintic and his engaging cast.

Many Conspicuous Talents

Miss George, with the ineffable charm of a comedienne long schooled to the niceties of polite comedy, wafts through the three acts with the lightness, delicacy and grace of a butterfly winging about a fragrant spring garden. Mr. Smith, like his costar, a veteran of the best the stage and latterly the screen have had to offer down the years, is the perfect blusterer, whose little balloon of filial pride is pricked by the same cleverly aimed dart that first had reached his heart in the days when love was young. A more perfect teaming of complementary talents is not to be found in the contemporary theater.

Among the supporting players other rich abilities also are to be found. Jayne Cotter and Donald Murphy lend the requisite youthful touch as Millicent and Tom Cornish, the granddaughter and her young groom, harassed by vast perplexities that turn out to be microscopic. Ann Andrews, the story's principal irritant, is a highly competent symbol of filthy rich incompetence, and Douglas Gregory is a helpful ballast in the role of Dr. Lionel Carter.

Next to the stars, however, it is Michael Rosenberg, the film magnate in quest of a valuable property, who achieves the personal triumph of the evening by his single appearance in the last act. His William Auchinschloss, picture producer, is a masterpiece of comic caricature. Seconding him in the department of more obvious fun is Charlotte Bemis, a maid of many ridiculous whimsies. The remainder are adequate in the minor assignments.

Donald Oenslager has contributed a single setting, subject to acute alterations in decor, that is by no means the least helpful adjunct to a comedy of superlative texture and continuous delight.

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Jan. 18.

Al Smith tells this story of the days when he was an assemblyman. He lived in a house in which two of his neighbors were (1) a chronic thief who wouldn't heed Al's plea to go straight and (2) an ambitious detective who kept asking Smith to get him a promotion.

One day the thief told Smith that he had heeded the advice, was going straight, and in appreciation for Al's interest presented him with a large, diamond-studded watch . . . Al opened the case and read the description: "To Herman Ridder, from his grateful employes at the Staatz-Zeitung."

KATHARINE CORNELL

Smith then went to the ambitious detective and advised: "Go to Herman Ridder. Ask him about his stolen watch. Then tell him that, by using your own, special methods, you'll recover it in 24 hours" . . . The detective spoke to Ridder, and the publisher vowed: "If you recover my missing watch, the entire German population of New York will support you for anything you want." . . . Smith then delivered the diamond-studded watch to the detective, who returned it to Ridder, and then told the grateful publisher: "The one thing I want is to become a captain." Ridder made the necessary phone calls, the necessary threats and the necessary promises . . . "And that detective," Al Smith reports, "got his promotion. He's now one of the highest officials in the police department."

Katharine Cornell, Judith Anderson and Ruth Gordon, who play the leading roles in Chekhov's "The Three Sisters," received congratulatory cablegrams from the ladies who play the same roles in the Moscow Art Theater's production of the play . . . The song, "Plain Chant for Americans," which Wilbur Evans sang on the Treasury Bond Parade's program, was composed by William Grant Hill, the Negro composer. The lyrics are by Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the Attorney General.

Last week's dinner to George V. McLaughlin was the beginning of his campaign to succeed Senator Bob Wagner . . . Koussevitsky, who now is in Hot Springs, has been invited to go to England in May and conduct the Shostakhovitch symphonies at the Russian Festival. He will return in time to renew his summer season at Tanglewood . . . The prize dogs that stay at home will do a benefit for their soldier dogs. The proceeds of the Westminster Kennel Club "Exhibition of Champions," to be held at Madison Square Garden on February 12, will go to "Dogs for Defense." The slogan is: "Let the Show Dog Help the War Dogs."

Joseph Cotten, the new star of Alfred Hitchcock's "Shadow of a Doubt," was at the Copacabana last night with Orson Welles. Cotton, who is under contract to David Selznick, told Welles: "I hear that Selznick is going to make a movie of 'Mein Kampf' " . . . That's an ideal picture for David," said Welles. "Because David loves to postpone" . . . "You've announced, and then postponed, many productions yourself," Cotton reminded him. "After all, Orson, you haven't done almost as many pictures as Selznick hasn't."

HEDDA HOPPER

"Dinah, Is There Anyone Finah?"

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 18.—Since Bing Crosby sang "Holiday Inn" with Dinah Shore on the air he'd like to have Dinah for his partner in one of his pictures. Bing has three lined up this year . . . Orson Welles' sudden trip to New York wasn't on official business—just a spur of the moment impulse. He went to the plane to say good-by to Joe Cotten, who was leaving for opening of "Shadow of a Doubt." Joe said, 'Gee, I wish you were going along!" Orson said, "Why not?" There was a vacant seat, and he took off . . . The bait which caused Irene Dunne to sign a Metro contract was "White Cliffs of Dover." However, she'll do two pictures there before they ever get around to "The Cliffs."

BING CROSBY

Kill Or Cure

When Ginger Rogers was home on account of sickness, Mitch Leisen took Ray Milland, Mischa Auer, Don Loper, and some others dressed up in their circus costumes, to the house to call on her. "Well," said Ginger, "the sight of them would either kill or cure you, so I came back to work next day." Incidentally, Ginger's taking time out to send out letters to all her friends, asking them to write their congressman regarding the $25,000 salary ceiling. She incloses a copy of letter she sent asks you to send them to all your friends, sort of a chain letter idea. That's what I call being interested in what happens to your country.

"Fun" in Washington

Preston Sturges is whipping together a story with a Washington background similar to that of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," only from a comedy angle—how a man can get lost in the maze of bureaucracy. Already Joel McCrea is up for the lead . . . Sturges was talking to Erie von Stroheim, who's back on the lot as an actor, and he said, "You know, Erie, you were just 10 years ahead of your time." "You're wrong," replied von Stroheim, "—I was 20!" . . . Lucille Ball had an argument with her rationing board, so only got an A card. Now has to travel to the studio with her husband, who leaves at 6 a. m., while she doesn't have to work until noon.

Retarded Relaxation

Alice Faye, finishing her first picture since baby's arrival, wants three months off with husband Phil Harris, but she's set for Bill LeBaron's next . . . I hear reason Gene Tierney came back from visiting her soldier-husband at camp was, because of a little domestic trouble between the two . . . Palm Springs residents are wondering who the good looking soldier is who's escorting Jean Arthur to the dupes . . . If and when the stork delivers that package to Madeleine Carroll, I hear she'll be back at Paramount doing another picture.

12 Die, 38 Hurt As Gale Sweeps Two States

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Jan. 18.—At least 12 persons were killed, and 38 others injured as weekend tornadic winds battered Georgia and Alabama at widely separated points.

Eleven dead were reported in Georgia, four of them in one family killed when wind destroyed a farm home in the Williamson section of Pike County. Five Pike County Negroes also were reported killed near Hollonville.

The farm family included Mr. and Mrs. Sol Willoughby and their two sons, aged 2 and 10. A daughter, age 7, was taken to a Griffin, Ga., hospital, suffering head injuries and broken bones.

A soldier was killed at Fort Benning when he stepped on a live wire. Twelve persons were seriously hurt and 20 others received injuries at Graves Station, near Dawson, when a tornado cut a 150-foot path through that south Georgia community.

Most of the injured at Graves Station were attending services at the Graves Methodist Church which was destroyed. Three homes were leveled and a school and gymnasium were unroofed.

Six persons were injured, none seriously, in a windstorm near Griffin, Ga.

High wind ripped off the roof of a warehouse and two sheds at Fort Benning.

Committee Warns Congress Of War Procurement Evils

Congress was told by a special Senate committee yesterday that it may be necessary for it to "define the responsibilities of all the major war agencies" in view of the inability of the War Production Board "even to centralize procurement and production" of fighting equipment for the United Nations.

Significantly, in view of the suggestion that has been made in some congressional circles that the authority to enter into war contracts might be taken from the War and Navy Departments and other procurement agencies and given to a civilian-dominated agency, the Senate Small Business Committee also declared:

"We must recognize that the hand that signs the war contract is the hand that shapes the future.

The committee struck hard at one result of procurement policies of war-contracting agencies—concentration of industrial power in America in the hands of a relatively few big companies.

"We feel that there is no justification for any large company or procurement officer to use the war as an excuse to help build the new industrial America along totalitarian lines," the committee declared in a report to the Senate.

"From the postwar viewpoint, we must recognize that the hand that signs the war contract is the hand that shapes the future," the committee warned. "It will take forthright measures to prevent the pattern of concentration developed in war production from becoming the pattern of concentration for manufacturing after the war."

The committee disclosed in its report that it has begun an investigation of the Government's program for discovery and utilization of domestic deposits of strategic and critical metals and minerals. The War, Navy, Interior and Commerce Departments and the War Production Board have been called upon to submit data.

The report cited testimony of small mine operators "to the effect that the War Production Board has failed to take action looking toward expansion of production of essential materials." It also called attention to a suggestion made by Senator Murray (Democrat) of Montana, committee chairman, that it might be advisable to concentrate responsibility for development of metals and minerals resources in the hands of a war materials director.

Warning that the war agencies may already have gone too far in cutting back the civilian economy, the committee made the suggestion that legislation laying out a "national policy on civilian supply" and setting up a civilian supply administrator within WPB might be the "only solution to this situation."

Starnes Warns Democrats On Appointing Marcantonio

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Representative Starnes (Democrat) of Alabama declared last night that House Democrats would run the risk of disrupting their own party if they voted today to make Representative Marcantonio (American Laborite) of New York a member of the powerful House Judiciary Committee.

Starnes, in a statement issued as ranking member of the House (Dies) Committee Investigating un-American Activities, remarked that Marcantonio's political views are not my views nor the views of the Democratic Party."

"In my judgment it would be most unfortunate to place him on the judiciary committee," Starnes said, "thereby giving him an effective sounding board and placing him in a position to help foster and promote and propose legislation which will disrupt peace and harmony within the Democratic Party."

Marcantonio has clashed repeatedly with members of Southern delegations, and with judiciary committee policy, in sponsoring poll tax repeal and antilynching legislation. He led the drive last session which forced a poll tax repeal bill out of the committee and past the House and has announced he will seek similar legislation this session.

Selection of Marcantonio for the judiciary post is expected to provide a major battle when the Democratic members of the House meet in caucus today to act on new committee assignments. As a non-Democrat, Marcantonio will be ineligible to attend.

Starnes told reporters that if it came to a test between Marcantonio and a Democrat for a place on the Judiciary Committee, the Democrat would surely win. It was learned, however, that some members of the Judiciary Committee will seek to prevent consideration even of Marcantonio's name by voting down "in priciple" any proposal for a twenty-sixth seat on the committee. This group will seek to limit the committee to 14 Democrats and 11 Republicans, with no "third party" members.

Flynn Juror Excused; Trial Will Continue

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 18.—Prosecution and defense agreed today to proceed with Errol Flynn's trial on three counts of statutory rape, with only one of two jurors accused by the State of fraud and deceit excused from duty.

She is Miss Elaine Forbes, secretary to an executive of a radio network. Miss Forbes was quoted in one affidavit by a prospective juror as having said she would convict the actor, hero of many a romantic movie adventure.

But affidavits by two other women, both excused from duty on the jury under peremptory challenges, quoted her as saying she would acquit him.

Retained on Jury

Still on the jury was Mrs. Lorene Boehm, attractive young wife of an industrial engineer. An affidavit against her had quoted her as saying, "I'm for Flynn in a big way."

Judge Leslie Still, returning to the bench after a morning spent in chambers, where counsel argued the matter, instructed Miss Forbes to step from the jury box, to be replaced by Mrs. Alice M. Chalfant, a housewife.

Then, in her presence, he informed the jury that attorneys had stipulated to her being excused, commenting, "You are to proceed as if this had never happened."

Later Miss Lynne Boyer, Hollywood singer, resumed her testimony about a party last September 27 in the Bel Air home of Fred McEvoy, former British bobsled racer, at which, the State charges, Flynn raped 17-year-old Betty Hansen.

The other two counts against Flynn charge that he twice raped Peggy Larue Satterlee, 16, Hollywood entertainer, during a weekend cruise aboard his yacht.

Dirksen Asks Research Aid

Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois yesterday introduced a joint resolution directing expansion of the Library of Congress' Legislative Reference Service to provide trained research secretaries for the use of congressional committees.

The idea, Dirksen explained, is to secure researchers of special competence in developing material and data pertient to legislative business pending before the committees. They would be made available at the request of the committee chairmen.

3 Meat Wholesalers Accused Of Price Conspiracy by OPA

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 18.—Criminal complaints charging conspiracy to violate price regulations were filed by the Government today against three wholesale meat companies and eight of their officers and employes.

The complaints, prepared by Assistant U. S. Attorney John F. Sonnett, alleged that the concerns and the individual defendants charged retail butchers prices for meat higher than those fixed by the Office of Price Administration.

Sylvan L. Joseph, regional OPA administrator, said the complaints were the first of a series of actions expected to result from the questioning of more than 1000 retail butchers throughout the region in the last two weeks. The region embraces New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

"It should not be assumed," Joseph said, "that the arrests today are the culmination of this investigation. Rather, they represent only the initial results."

The complaints today, Joseph said, "are the beginning of a campaign by which we hope to break up the black market which has developed on an extensive scale and has resulted in exorbitant charges to the public for its meat."

Sonnett said his investigation showed that in one month a retail butcher had overpaid one of the wholesalers by $4000 to $5000.

The defendants were named as: Geier & Geier, Inc.; Harry Geier, president; Eugene John Rudman, cashier and bookkeeper, and Morris Herzfeld, assistant bookkeeper; the Bronx Meat Co.; Morris Schwartz and Louis Zeleleznick, partners; Henry Schultz, cashier, and Orscar Zeleleznick, salesman; Louis Pesky, Inc., and Louis Pesky, president.

The Pesky concern is charged with selling and delivering wholesale pork cuts at prices higher than permitted by OPA regulations, while the other two firms are accused of overcharging on veal carcasses and wholesale cuts.

Sonnett expressed the opinion that such overcharges were passed along to the consumer, so that the public was the ultimate sufferer.

The complaints charged that all the defendants planned to conceal their evasion of lawful prices and to present false records.

Bread Knives Sought in Vain

"and from what I've observed of feminine bread slicers, they can use one or the other of those implements with identical results."

"I'm going to get mighty tired of eating buns and doughnuts for breakfast," muttered a Pentagon Building inmate, "but I know darned well the little woman will never be able to slice bread to fit our toaster. The morning meal certainly isn't what it used to be, what with no toast, the bacon shortage and everything."

Housewives who until yesterday used bread knives, vintage of circa 1932, to open stubborn desk drawers or pry tops from mayonnaise jars, regretted their folly and prayed for the advent of a scissors grinder to repair the damage. And most of the kitchen habitues agreed, to a woman, that Sherman was right about war.

Herring Slated for OPA Personnel Position

Former Senator Clyde Herring of Iowa is slated to be appointed assistant administrator of the Office of Price Administration in charge of personnel. He's known to have been offered the job by his former Senate colleague, Prentiss Brown, who was confirmed yesterday by the Senate for OPA administrator. Herring would have a ticklish job. Briefly, his job would be to hire the most competent people available for OPA, but people who wouldn't offend the public generally and the Democrats in particular. Herring would clear State appointments with House and Senate Democrats. Opposition party members in key State jobs who have maintained their opposition would be eased out. Washington personnel would be only a sideline for Herring. Few changes are anticipated here.

Judge Marvin Jones of the District Court has been given a leave of absence. He'll advise Jimmy Byrnes on food problems and his appointment has the enthusiastic approval of Agriculture Secretary Wickard. Judge Jones will return to the court. He has no plans to quit. In fact, he was offered the job of Agriculture Undersecretary a few weeks ago, but he refused . . . Paul W. Gordon is the most recent top-drawer official to quit Interior's Division of Territories and Island Possessions. He's going with former Gov. Herbert Lehman . . . Everett G. Holt, who's widely regarded as one of Uncle Sam's leading rubber experts, has quit Commerce for a job with Rubber Reserve.

Two well-known Federal officials are planning to retire, Grosvenor M. Jones, acting chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and Richard N. Elliott, assistant comptroller general. Jones has spent 32 years in the service and he'll retire shortly after a new chief is appointed. Elliott, a former member of Congress from Indiana, will be 70 on April 25 and he'll retire on that day. Elliott vacates one of the choicest plums in Government, $9000 a year for 15 years. Several "lame ducks" are after the job, but it's slated for Dudley Bagley, the able second assistant . . . Charles M. Knoble, Postoffice's assistant chief of air mail, has quit to join Pennsylvania Central . . . John W. Hunt has been appointed superintendent of postmasters to succeed W. J. Dixon, who has retired.

Civil Aeronautics soon will announce a wide expansion of its pilot training work Plans are being worked out for CAA to give basic air training to would-be Army and Navy flyers. Graduates of the CAA training would be given by the two services. The teen-age draft has about knocked the training program in the head. The services get the boys before CAA gets a chance to give them basic training. That's why plans are being worked out to give CAA a far bigger job. CAA's record on training is one of the best.

Government cafeterias have one meatless day each week and do not plan to add another one soon. In fact, they'll resist another attempt to cut down their meat supply. More and more Federal workers are eating their big meal at lunchtime in Government cafeterias. They find it cheaper living, eating country style . . . Over in the captain of the guard's office in the vast Pentagon Building are hundreds of articles that have been lost by employes. Two men are kept busy returning articles to their owners. However, about 30 per cent of the articles lost aren't called for. These people apparently don't know where the office is located. Jesse N. Rice is guard captain.

Commerce Department will pay overtime on a 48-hour week to Census, Bureau of Standards, Geodetic Survey and other of its employes who work on a round-the-clock schedule. Time taken out to eat won't be charged against the employes but they will be told to eat on the run. In computing overtime, periods of less than 15 minutes will be disregarded. The same condition applies to leave. The Bureau Chief must approve overtime above a 48-hour week in an emergency, but the emergency can't be longer than a month. Most agencies have laid down overtime pay policies, but many of the people down below are doing their best to scuttle them.

Senator McKellar of Tennessee yesterday introduced a bill which would prevent any Federal employe between the ages of 18 and 38 from being deferred from military service. The bill will get nowhere and it shouldn't. The President has appointed a very able committee to work out a uniform draft policy for Federal workers and its report is expected to be made around February 1. It's a good bet that the report will show that far fewer men have been deferred from Government than they have from industry . . . There's a move on to use WAACS and WAVES in Civil Service jobs here. Civil Service hasn't been able to fill the demands and it's argued that recruiting would be easier if uniforms were out on the grils. Navy did this during World War I and it didn't work out very well.

Milkmen Collect Books

Miami, Fla. (AP).—Milkmen of the area are going to turn book collectors—all for the soldiers' morale. Dade County Red Cross and Victory Book Campaign officials suggested housewives leave a book with their empty milk bottles—saves tires and gas. Books are destined for members of the armed forces.

How to Slash Budget

Richmond, Va.—A piece of glass weighing about 20 pounds fell from a light fixture in Mayor Gordon Ambler's office and crashed on his desk a short time after he had left it. A leather-covered binder holding papers on the city budget was cut.

The mayor surveyed the wreckage and grinned: "That's one way to slash the budget."

Priorities Favored for 3 Hospitals

Nearly $2,000,000 in Construction Ruled Out for Duration Of War by WPB

Post Staff Writer

Nearly two million dollars worth of proposed hospital construction here is definitely "out for the duration," a War Production Board spokesman told The Post last night in the wake of an official report recommending that priorities be granted only for the building of three fringe hospitals at Arlington, Bethesda and Cheverly.

The report was made to Maury Maverick, director of the governmental division of WPB, by Everett W. Jones, head hospital consultant of the agency. While some hospitals whose projects have been eliminated by the ruling against priorities plan to make an appeal to WPB to reject the Jones recommendations, little hope is given that such appeals will be successful. WLB is unlikely to go against the recommendations of its expert, it was pointed out, and Jones' report is backed by the United States Public Health Service, whose chief consultant, Neil F. MacDonald, aided in the study.

Rejection Softened

Rejection of the tremendous expansion plan scheduled by the Federal Works Agency for the metropolitan area was softened by the fact that hospitals here have agreed to add 551 general and 76 obstetrical beds without further construction, making a total of 627.

There is considerable doubt, however, that all those 627 beds can be added immediately. A Post survey, published Sunday, showed that a total of 580 beds could be added at once, provided that Freedmen's Hospital gets an increase in its budget. While the Jones report released to the press, did not give a breakdown hospital by hospital, it was learned that he has listed 25 beds for Leland Memorial, which the hospital does not expect to add right away, and some additional ones at Garfield and Doctors which will not be added except in the case of extreme necessity.

5 More Than Sought

In any event, however, the 627 estimated by Jones, plus 300 in new fringe construction, 150 beds in Gallinger's new maternity wing already under construction, 28 in Georgetown released by the remodeling of Therkeld School, makes a total of 1105 additional beds or five more than has been sought in the metropolitan area. Such a solution of a difficult situation was possible only through the careful studies of the hospital consultants and the cooperation of hospital authorities here.

The 1105 additional beds added to the 4115 in use in the metropolitan area at the time of the survey gives a total of 5220, or 171 more than the 5049 minimum the United States Public Health Service recommended as necessary in a report to the Senate last October. Based on a census of 1,260,000 this gives a ratio of 4.13 beds per 1000 population, Jones reported to Maverick.

One of the important factors in this solution is an increase in Freedmen's budget, since 150 of the beds are to be added there, 40 of which will be for obstetrical cases. The United States Public Health Service is backing attempts to secure a larger budget for staffing Freedmen's to take care of additional patients, The Post learned.

Rental Is Planned

Dr. John Orem, superintendent of Sibley Hospital, learning of the WPB report today, said the hospital would seek to rent again the six row houses it vacated of tenants last December at the request of FWA in preparation for an $80,000 building project to provide 58 additional beds. The hospital is now taking a $450-a-month loss on this.

Other canceled projects are a 100-bed addition at Alexandria, scheduled to have cost $712,000; largest share of a $381,000 project at Georgetown University Hospital; two projects to provide maternity beds at Emergency to cost $225,000; a $175,000 project at Garfield; a $175,000 project at Columbia, a venereal disease hospital at Gallinger to have cost $218,000, and another Gallinger project which was to have cost $253,000.

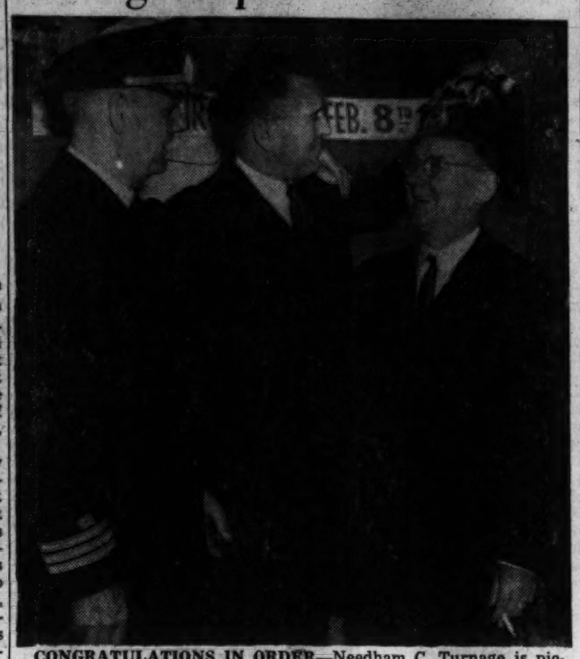
End of Discussion

The WPB report practically puts an end to the hospital discussions which have raged in Washington for more than two years.

Only problem still left upon which no final action has been taken is that of some sort of locked hospital for veneral disease cases committed by court action. No definite release will be made on this subject for two weeks, The Post learned.

Meanwhile, yesterday the first convalescent tubercular patients moved into the renovated Upshur Hospital, at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest. The hospital is for arrest cases from Gallinger and Glenn Dale, and will be operated by Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, Gallingher superintendent, as a branch of that hospital. Upshur can accommodate between 125 and 150 patients.

Almas Temple Shriners Name Turnage Imperial Potentate



CONGRATULATIONS IN ORDER—Needham C. Turnage is pictured at Almas Temple after he had been elected illustrious potentate of Shriners. Turnage, who is chairman of underprivileged children and servicemen's committee of Shrine Circus scheduled February 8 to 14 at Uline Arena, is having the potentate hat put on his head by outgoing Potentate Howard P. Foley, center. At left is Comdr. Jack Spaulding, U. S. N., creator of the annual East-West Shrine charities football game

Needham C. Turnage, who has been prominently identified with Masonic work in Washington for more than two decades, last night became the fifty-seventh potentate of the Almas Temple Shriners.

Turnage was elected to succeed Howard P. Foley as the illustrious leader for the 1943 season.

Turnage, who is United States commissioner for the District is playing an important role with the Shrine Circus which is scheduled February 8-14, inclusive, at Uline Arena for the benefit of the Almas Temple Charities Fund. The new potentate is chairman of the underprivileged children's and servicemen's committee, and upon him rests the burden of arranging for the presence of some 10,000 crippled and poor kiddies and 5000 servicemen as guests of the Nobles during the week's show.

Foley, general chairman of the Shrine Circus, turned over the gavel to Turnage during ceremonies at the temple.

The first Shrine potentate was Maj. William Bayliss, elected January 7, 1886.

James A. Councilor became the next in line to succeed Turnage as potentate when he was named chief rabban, Raymond M. Florance was elected assistant rabban, Edmund O. Carl high priest and prophet, Stanley D. Willis, treasurer and Frederick Wilken recorder.

Frank T. Shull was appointed captain of guard; Ralph M. Wolfe, first Oriental guide; Omer W. Clark, first ceremonial master; Bruce R. Allen, second ceremonial master; Renah F. Camalier, marshal; John M. Credille, outer guard, and George W. Rue, inner guard.

District Red Cross Planning For National Funds Campaign

The District Red Cross, at its annual meeting yesterday, added up its accomplishments of the past 12 months and then turned eyes front toward "the greatest money campaign in its history."

The campaign, it is hoped, will be started by March 9, A. G. Neal, chairman of the 1943 drive, announced. The total quota figure is expected to be announced today.

Subquotas will be allocated to the various campaign divisions—residential, business, city and such—this afternoon, Neal stated. Advance gifts will be solicited as usual during the week before the opening of the general drive, he said.

Volunteers Expected

When the campaign is in full swing 9000 or 10,000 volunteers are expected to help in the solicitation through the various teams, Neal said.

"By far the most important matter on our present horizon is the March drive for the sinews of war to insure the continuance and expansion of our work," Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman emeritus of the District chapter, stated at the meeting in the Pan American Building.

With a verbal pat on the back for the Junior Red Cross, which showed nearly 100 per cent enrollment in schools last year, John Clifford Folger, chairman of the chapter since November 1, said, "If every adult will display his Red Cross emblem as proudly as the children do, everyone in the city will know there is a Red Cross campaign going on."

Admiral Ghormley Speaks

Vice Admiral Robert Lee Ghormley, in command of the United States Naval Forces in the South Pacific until last October, told of being "impressed by the modern methods used in preserving lives and limbs" in that area. Much of this would not have been possible without blood plasma and the sulfa drugs, he said.

Speaking for "the receiving end," as the admiral put it, "it's a great boost to a man's morale if he knows that when a Jap wings him the help of plasma is ready at hand."

The most dramatic increase announced was in the blood donor program, which Chairman Folger said handled as many as 500 persons a day this year compared to the 100 a week which was looked on as outstanding before.

During the year 39,653 persons donated blood, the records show. Folger voiced the hope that the number will exceed 100,000 this year.

Phenomenal increase, also war born, was revealed in the number of nurses' aides which grew 600 per cent during the year. The major project for 1943 will be recruiting nurses' aides in the Southeast.

Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman of volunteer special services for the District Chapter and secretary of the American Red Cross, thanked the 7000 women who gave over two and half million hours of volunteer service during the year. This was almost a 100 per cent increase over 1941.

49 Cents An Hour

At the rate of 49 cents an hour—a low price for unskilled labor—volunteer hours in 1942 represented nearly a million dollars.

Miss Boardman gave first mention in her praise to the staff assistant's corps, which added 307 members to its staff during the year under Mrs. C. B. Mickelwait. Work has increased "tremendously" for the staff assistants, who man booths, switchboards and typewriters, act as translators and handle radio programs and press releases, she said.

A great amount of reading material for the blind was "brailled" by Mrs. Frank Straat's corps, Miss Boardman said. In actual figures, 22,421 pages were shellacked; 7298 transcribed; 30,200 printed, 556 processed and 229 volumes bound.

Gray Ladies Corps

This month marks a quarter of a century of service by the Gray Ladies Corps, which Mrs. John E. Ewell, chairman, stated in her annual report certified 167 women. Four hospitals were added to the list the Gray Ladies serve during the year.

Camp and hospital service had furnished 35 day rooms and 7 hospital sun rooms at military camps in the Washington area, it was reported. Distributed among camps and hospitals were 2300 books, 40 pianos, 39 musical instruments, radios and games, she reported.

In the survey of chapter activities growing programs in the canteen and motor corps, surgical dressings and knitting departments, home service, disaster preparedness, first aid and home nursing instruction, and social service activities such as holiday gifts of the Junior Red Cross were mentioned.

The chapter's only branch, Takoma Park, has a membership of 707 and is now 14 years old, Folger said. More than 6000 garments and 90,000 surgical dressings were made in 1942; 2800 meals were served by canteen volunteers and nearly 3000 miles were driven by motor corps members, according to the records.

P.-T. A. Unit to Meet

The Parent-Teacher Association of Montgomery Blair High School, Silver Spring, will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the school library. E. M. Douglas, principal, will talk on the draft as it affects the student.

Milk Famine Here Feared By Dairymen

26% Price Increase To Offset Rising Costs Asked at Agriculture Hearing

Drainage of farm labor to war industries and the attractive rate increases granted other commodities threaten Washington with a milk "famine" unless relief is granted local producers, the Department of Agriculture was told yesterday by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Since the freezing or restoration of farm labor is beyond the control of the Agriculture Department, the principal request made at the all-day hearing was for a 26 per cent price increase for liquid milk sold to the distributors. This would amount to 2 cents per quart.

Excluded from the request was milk sold for cream. This exclusion, it was pointed out, would reverse the decision after a similar hearing last year, when a price increase was granted for this product, thus putting the burden of the increase on the users of that luxury rather than on the whole milk consumers.

Principal witness at the hearing was B. B. Derrick, manager of the producers' association. Derrick testified that since January, 1941, the milk price to producers in the Washington milkshed has increased 12 per cent, while the farmer's labor cost has risen 61 per cent, his feed cost 44 per cent and other production at least 25 per cent.

As a result, Derrick said, more and more farmers were turning to other kinds of production, tempted by the 31 per cent local increase in prices for all foods, including 72 per cent for eggs, 100 per cent for lard, 69 per cent for potatoes, 46 per cent for cheese and 41 per cent for butter.

Already 2 per cent, or about 24 of the dealers supplying Washington, have gone out of business, and production is 8000 gallons per day lower than at this time last year.

Labor Reported Scarce

Members of the association testified to their inability to get hired help, and to the loss of profit in devoting their land and time to milk production, rather than converting to those products now commanding higher prices.

The demand for beef is especially ominous for the Washington milk consumer, Agriculture officials were told, because so many heifers, potential milk yielders, are being slaughtered for veal.

The consumers' side was not presented at the hearing except for a protest by Mrs. Edward Morris, perennial hearing representative for the Fort Davis Citizens Association, that the consumers had not been given sufficient notice of the hearing. They will have a chance to present evidence and to cross-examine the producers when the hearings are resumed at 8:30 this morning.

Indicted Man Found Shot To Death

Joseph Davidson, Jr., 31, of 4411 Forty-second Street Northwest was found shot to death yesterday in the attic of 3761 Chesapeake Street Northwest by two policemen who answered a call to investigate a prowler at the latter address.

Police said Davidson held a .22-caliber revolver in his right hand and that he was kneeling half-slumped over a bed. A bullet wound was found in his right temple.

Davidson had been indicted on two charges of grand larceny and two of housebreaking, police said. He had been freed on bond and was to appear in District Court tomorrow.

Pvts. David M. Brown and Franklin Gue, in an Eighth Precinct scout car, investigated and said they saw a man on the first floor and later traced him to the attic. As they attempted to break in, Davidson shot himself.

Capt. Robert J. Barrett, assistant chief of detectives, said Davidson was wanted for a series of robberies. Police said occupants of the house are Dr. David O. Smith, a physician at the Veterans' Administration, and his wife. Neither was home at the time.

Violinist Carroll Glenn Scores Triumph at Beethoven Festival

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the first concert of a Beethoven Festival on Monday night in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Carroll Glenn. Program: Overture to "Fidelio," Symphony No. 7 in A major, Violin Concerto in D major.

If more music-lovers had known in advance what a pleasure was connected with the local debut of the gifted young American violinist, Carroll Glenn, there would have been a larger attendance last evening at the first concert of the Beethoven Festival of the National Symphony Orchestra. The many empty seats might have been filled by enthusiasts who will now have to hear about her success and her captivating artistry at second hand while regretting their lost opportunity. Miss Glenn is an easy winner in the class of talented, technically skilled and personable musicians, and the audience congratulated her with a half-dozen recalls after her highly satisfying performance in the concerto.

MISS GLENN

Her greatest asset is the magnetic vitality with which she projects the music as she feels it. Her tone is vibrant and stimulating, with no lapses into dull or uncolored drawing of the bow, and its variety of tint is manifold. Her playing is continually alive with emotional impulse and speaks for a temperament both ardent and poetic. Her attitude toward the concerto was not that of awe at its greatness but of active participation in the introduction of a novelty, as though she had been disclosing its lyric beauties and its spiritual implications as a sympathetic discovery. An occasional flaw in her performance was to her credit, testifying to the eagerness of reading.

Among Miss Glenn's engaging attributes is the youthful zest of her playing which imparts constant freshness to her tone. This was particularly notable in her treatment of the cadenzas, which were not presented as bravura embellishments, but as real soliloquies of the instrument endowed with eloquence of phrase and significance of accent. Cadenzas are frequently boring because they are presented as obvious showmanship, but Miss Glenn made hers interesting by her personal reading.

Hans Kindler was in genuine rapprochment with Beethoven throughout the evening and his readings of the "Fidelio" overture and the seventh symphony were intimately felt and contagiously expressed. Perhaps his insight was at its keenest in those passages in which Beethoven was so masterly an exponent of the sense of mystery—those moments of suspense that hold one almost breathless on the threshold of transcendent glory.

U. S. to Launch Medical-Care Plan in Workers' Dormitories

Determined to keep Government girls fit and on the job during wartime, Uncle Sam will embark upon a definite plan of governmental medicine when four new dormitories to house 7000 women open here this spring.

The medical care plan, first of its kind to be adopted in the United States, was disclosed at a press conference held by the Public Buildings Administration to discuss the progress of the dormitories and their decoration.

A panel of physicians, selected by the District Medical Society, will serve each dormitory at a fixed fee, probably $1 a patient. Office space will be furnished for the doctors at each project. A chief nurse and an assistant nurse will be on duty at each of the four projects, and each will be paid out of public funds.

Girls to Pay Fees

The girls themselves will pay the doctors' fees, set sufficiently low so as to be within the means of lower bracket incomes. No girl will be permitted to stay in the infirmary more than 24 hours without enlisting the services of a physician.

This entire medical care plan, even to the design of the infirmaries, was developed by the United States Public Health Service. Some of the load will be taken from local hospitals by the infirmaries, it is anticipated.

A spokesman for the United States Public Health Service revealed last night that similar arrangements were being put into effect in many Government dormitories throughout the United States.

In every instance the local medical societies have been asked to back the plan, and name the physicians. A United States Public Health Service spokesman last night told The Post that since patients would be concentrated, so doctors could see more than one at a time, and office space would cost the physician nothing, the panel fixed-fee plan was expected to attract doctors.

Dormitory residents will be free to call physicians of their own choice, who will not, of course, be bound by the fixed fee arrangements.

No Infirmary Charges

Infirmary charges will not be made, and infirmary care is part of what the residents will get for their rent which will range about $24.50 for a single room. In all probability, United States Public Health Service said, food will be served in the infirmaries from the cafeterias with a 10-cent extra charge to cover cost of delivery there.

The four dormitories which will open are: Arlington Farms, which will have six residence halls, each accommodating about 600 girls; West Potomac Park, three residence halls; Langston Stadium, for colored girls, at Oklahoma Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street, Northeast, three halls; and Suitland, out near the Census Building, one residence hall.

Arlington will have a 60-bed infirmary, West Potomac 60, Langston 12, and Suitland six.

Beside making it easy for the Government girl to afford proper medical care, a definite program of health education will be instituted, W. E. Bissell, residence manager, said yesterday.

House Staff of Four

As well as a housemother and two assistants, each project will have a recreational or educational director. Among suggested activities are courses in first aid and Red Cross home nursing. Bowling, horseback, directed exercises, clay modeling and folk dancing are among others. Five hundred applications from "girls of 18 to 67" have been received.

The four dormitories are being furnished under the direction of Miss Gladys Miller, home planning consultant for PBA. The rooms, all 8x10, attractive in color and furniture styling, are being furnished at a cost of $75 each. Among the outstanding ideas developed by Miss Miller, a noted decorator, is the cosmetic cupboard over the bureau, with sliding mirror doors.

Newspaperwomen who attended the PBA press conference yesterday were interested not only in the furniture and gay colors of the rooms but in the dormitory fules.

Regulations

Drinking?

"Well we won't sell any liquor on the premises, and we hope every girl will be able to come in under her own steam," Bissell told the press. Asked for a definite answer on whether or not girls could drink on the premises, Bissel said the rule was no, but added that if a girl wanted to mix a cocktail he hoped she wouldn't ask him about it.

Pets?

"No. Goldfish? Now why bring them up?

The dormitory plans originally called for 15,000 rooms but priorities and uncertainty as to just how many new Government girls will be coming to Washington have cut the figure to 7000, eliminating for now at least two proposed projects, East Potomac Park and Stadium, and cutting down on the size of others.

3 D. C. Bills Introduced In Congress

Main Measure Bans Discrimination by Places of Public Accommodation

A trio of District bills were introduced in Congress yesterday, all of them similar to measures which went unacted upon last session.

Chief among them was a bill brought in by Senator Barbour (Republican) of New Jersey, which would prohibit racial or religious discrimination against free use of places of public accommodation.

Meaning of Term

"Places of public accommodation" were defined in the measure as meaning hotels, theaters, restaurants and similar establishments. Similar to legislation introduced last session by former Senator Smathers (Democrat) of New Jersey, the bill provides that any person aggrieved by such discrimination could collect between $100 and $500 from the offender through Municipal Court procedure. The violator also could be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor in Police Court and be made liable to $10 to $100 fine or a jail sentence of from 10 to 100 days.

A second local measure was introduced in the Senate by Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota. This would prohibit experiments on live dogs in the District, and is a counterpart of an anti-vivisection bill put into the House hopper by Representative Burdick (Republican) of North Dakota.

Tax Bill Reintroduced

In the House, Representative McGehee (Democrat) of Mississippi reintroduced the tax sales bill which passed the House but lapsed in the Senate last session. The measure would make it easier to clear titles on property sold for taxes, by making it possible for deedholders to pay off outstanding tax certificates through the District tax collector instead of having to make payment directly to the purchaser as is now the case.

McGehee eliminated a controversial section stipulating interest rates chargeable on the certificates which had helped to hold the bill up last year.

Victory Sidelights

District OCD Transport Unit to Meet

William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, will head a newly appointed war transportation committee of the civilian mobilization division of the metropolitan area OCD, it was announced yesterday.

The committee was formed to study Washington's transportation problems arising from the war situation, and to make recommendations to Coordinator John Russell Young for necessary programs. The first meeting will be held at 3:30 p. m. Thursday in Room 1008, Municipal Center.

Howard F. Wentworth, chief of public relations, Department of Vehicles, will serve as secretary.

War Savings Education Campaign to Open Feb. 1

Instructions for a War Savings educational campaign for the week of February 1 were given last night at a meeting of the Block Leader Trainers held at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building. Mrs. Raymond H. Ewell presided.

The purpose of the campaign is to secure pledges from housewives to save in the home in order that the family as a whole can help in the purchase of war bonds and stamps. Representatives of the following women's organizations are cooperating: Business and Professional Women's Club, Soroptimists Club, Zonta, American Women's Voluntary Services, American Association of University Women, Democratic Women's National Council, National Association of Women Lawyers, B'nai B'rith and the Twentieth Century Club.

Surgical Dressing Unit To Hold Special Meeting

There will be a special meeting of the Engineer Surgical Dressing Unit today at 7:30 p. m. at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue. A Red Cross representative will speak on Red Cross courses to be made available to interested groups.

First-Aid Class To Open Next Monday

A first-aid class for residents of the Arkansas civilian defense area will open under Red Cross auspices next Monday, 8 to 10 p. m. at the Transfiguration Church, 1415 Gallatin Street Northwest. Miss Mary A. Greco will be instructor for the 10-week course.

Sidelights in the Nation's Capital at War

Public hearings on the pick-up cab service will be held by the Public Utilities Commission in the District Building board room at 10 o'clock this morning. Among the problems to be discussed are rates that will be equable for passengers and drivers, methods of enforcement and the number of hours a day that this service should be mandatory.

Man Killed When Car Runs Into Culvert

Paul Revere Smooth, jr., Negro, of 1252 Columbia Road Northwest, was killed yesterday afternoon when the car he was driving ran into a culvert at Oxon Hill, Md. Brought to Casualty Hospital by the Marlboro Rescue Squad, he was pronounced dead upon arrival. Smooth, 25, is survived by his wife.

Central Labor Union Names John Locher

Other officers elected were: Charles B. McCloskey, vice president; Robert Lester, financial secretary; Frank Coleman, recording secretary; Ernest Fontana, treasurer; Donald C. Dow, Frank W. Lee and Ernest B. Spangler, trustees, and Michael Tozolo, sergeant-at-arms.

Police Inspector Yearns for Missing Pet

"Jimmy," the Irish setter belonging to Inspector Clarence Tally, night superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department, is still missing, and Tally misses him very much.

Intelligent, medium red and about 15 months old, "Jimmy" has been gone since Friday, and Inspector Talley, who lives near McLean, Va., fears the dog may have followed hikers and lost his way home.

SHOP AND RUN

By Marianne

Here are a few of the lovely things we discovered one of the war relief organizations is making.

You will look like a Bellini painting and feel as warm as a kitten near the fire in one of these fluffy hand crocheted head scarfs. For nighttime wear tie several ribbons here and there. They also can be rolled up and loosely knotted around the neck for a chic but effortless look. These are an excellent buy for only $2.00 and $2.50.

The softest yarns are made into unbelievably tiny baby booties and mittens. Even if you can't crochet, you can still have these handmade baby clothes at very reasonable prices. $1.00 each.

As near to a real French poodle as one would want for one's lapel! This one is charming—made of soft black suede with curly fur for hair. A conversation piece for your lapel and one you won't tire of for $1.25.

Preserve that "every hair in place" look with a wool crocheted snood. These will be made to order so they'll fit your head size perfectly. A ribbon through the top and one in the back allows you to adjust it to please your fancy. The ribbons are removable. $3.00.

Babies have all the luck. A sacque like this, exquisitely made from the finest wool, is excuse enough for everyone to spoil baby. It can be made in any color you want. $4.00.

Other items of interest were very large pure silk scarfs with flags of the United Nations in bright colors against a white background; flowered cotton mittens with all-over stitching that make it a pleasure to handle hot pots and pans, 50c each or two for 75c;

Please call NAtional 4200 Extension 324 between 9:00 and 5:30 and we'll tell you where to find these.

That Wild Arnold Girl

By Irene Ernhart

The story thus far: Jenny Arnold understands herself well enough to know that most of her brassy, wise-cracking modernism is a defensive front against the petty scheming of her older sister, Madeline; the middle-aged and embarrassing foibles of her mother, Celia, who is currently enamored of the oily young dancing master, Tony Torrento, and the heartache she feels because of her father's consistent failure to understand her, or to return the genuine affection she feels for him. Even to Bud Nelson, who is in love with her, Jenny never reveals her true feelings. Only when she meets Bill Winslow, Madeline's new flame, does she realize that her cultivated hardness is only skin deep—and that she can, whether she wants to or not, actually fall in love.

CHAPTER VI

A car crunched in the drive presently and she stared as her father got out. She didn't know when he'd last come home at this hour in the afternoon.

The weary droop of his shoulders struck a chill through her heart. On sudden impulse she got up and started down.

From the direction of the library she heard sounds of violent commotion. "Who said to change it around?" James Arnold thundered. "And who in hell may I ask said those red drapes had to go?"

"It was the young lady, sir," she heard one of the men say meekly. "She gave orders for what was wanted."

"Jenny?" He flushed brick red when he saw her, and his blue eyes narrowed with anger. "I might have known it was you! You can't be satisfied with dragging the family's reputation through muck, but you have to meddle with the only spot in this house I can call my own!"

"But I only——"

Oh horrors, was that the front door opening? If it was, then it was Madeline and Bill Winslow returning from their date!

"It doesn't matter in the least to you, does it," James Arnold continued furiously, "that I'm hard pressed, and that there's a war on, and that I've asked you to economize a little? You've no thought, not least regard, Jenny, for anyone but yourself!"

"What's the war got to do with it?" Jenny mumbled, not even knowing what she was saying.

Surely Madeline would hear what was going on and would have the good taste to steer him somewhere else. But no, as if with intent, Madeline came straight to the library. Her blue eyes widened a bit when she saw father's furious face and she put her hand on Bill's arm in a clinging little-girl gesture.

"Father's raving because the decorators are here," Jenny choked out. It was all Madeline's responsibility. Now let her take over!

"Jenny's perfectly right, darling," she chided sweetly. "The old house does need some brightening up."

"But it wasn't my——" Jenny had that wild trapped feeling again that made her want to strike out fiercely. She saw now quite clearly that Madeline intended letting father go right on believing it was Jenny who had wanted the house done over.

"Oh, well," she snapped, "what's the use of raising Cain now anyway! They've been hired and they've started tearing things up!"

She stalked past Bill, painfully aware of the surprise and bewilderment in his clear eyes. It was quite evident that he thought her a hellion, an ungrateful, extravagant, vicious brat of a daughter, just as father did.

In her own room again she went and stared out of the window blindly. Queerly and unaccountably her mind went back to another time when she and Madeline had both become fascinated by the same man. She'd been only 16 then, too, young really for Perry Fadwell, and Madeline had been 18.

But she had seen him first, brought herself madly and completely in love with him.

When he had eloped with Madeline she thought the world never be the same again. Nor life worth living. Everything had crashed. She had wanted to die because there didn't seem to be anything at all left worth living for. And yet she knew now that she hadn't really loved Perry. It had only been an infatuation. . . . Maybe that's what this was . . .

She heard the sound of the front door opening, heard Madeline's rather high voice calling out something.

An overpowering impulse to go to the window to watch Bill Winslow go to his car assailed her. But she caught the bedpost and clung. "I won't make a fool of myself!" she whispered. "I won't!"

But she didn't need to go running to the window like an infatuated child. She knew exactly how Bill looked. The broad shoulders, the way his dark head was held, the swing to his walk, the way his gray eyes gazed so steadily at one, these things were all burned into her mind from just this morning's contact with him.

And it was so mad and crazy that it disgusted her.

"I'll go dancing tonight!" she resolved suddenly. "With Bud Nelson, to the wildest, giddiest night spot in town. The El Toreador! And we'll have some of that red wine everybody talks about, and we'll laugh, and I'll forget all about this awful day—and Bill Winslow!"

She'd go down and phone Bud now. And she'd make Madeline explain to father how it was about the decorators. It wasn't fair that she should take the blame for something Madeline had done

She met her sister on the stairs. "Oh Jenny, isn't he marvelous? I could cry, I'm so in love with him!"

The cold contemptuous silence with which Jenny greeted this outburst penetrated at last.

"Sweet," Madeline cooed, "you aren't still angry—"

"You know darned well I am! You can come right back down and tell father I had nothing to do with changing his library or doing over the living room!"

Madeline's blue eyes took on a sly expression. She laughed mirthlessly. "You certainly put on an exhibition for Bill. I apologized for you though, told him you weren't always like that."

"Thanks," Jenny answered dryly. "Now will you kindly come down and square me with father?"

Jenny grimaced.

"As long as you're in bad grace anyway, Jenny, couldn't you let it go about the decorators? After all he's over it now anyway. I wheedled him into letting me have my room done over too, as long as they're here. And after all, since it's all settled now—"

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn

This question concerns your play of today's hand. You are sitting South at a five-diamond contract: West opens the heart king, then shifts to the jack or spades. How do you plan the play to take eleven tricks?

The bidding:

Opening lead—♡ K.

The Solution

South makes five diamonds by developing a strip and endplay on West. He wins the spade lead with the ace, leads a small trump, which is won in dummy, and returns the heart ten, ruffing in the closed hand with a diamond honor. One more high trump draws the last adverse diamond, and South's two remaining spade honors are cashed.

Next, dummy is entered by the lead of a small trump, which declarer preserved for this purpose. The queen of hearts is played and a small club is discarded from the closed hand. West is thrown in the lead with the heart ace, and West now has a hopeless choice of leads. If he returns a heart, South ruffs on the board and throws off his queen of clubs. If West leads a club, South makes both the ace and queen. No matter what card West chooses, declarer makes five diamonds, losing only the ace and king of hearts.

Nelson Rockefeller Addresses Democratic Women at Luncheon

By Genevieve Reynolds

The Post Club Editor

If the United States drops its "Good Neighbor Policy" with the Latin-American countries after World War II as it did in 1918, it might as well fold up now. So declared Nelson A. Rockefeller, Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs, who was guest speaker at the Women's National Democratic Club's luncheon meeting yesterday.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"The bitterness of the Latin-American republics which resulted from being taken on and then dropped after World War I cannot be overcome if repeated," he said. "Never again will we obtain their trust and respect if that happens."

To avoid a repetition of this he emphasized that the cooperative good neighbor policy should be adopted as a national program by the United States. Furthermore, that it should be a permanent one. Paying high tribute (as a Republican) to the Democratic Party's instituting of the effective Good Neighbor policy, he declared that it would go down in history as a major contribution of the party.

"A public enlightened on the importance and significance of continuing such a policy permanently is the best solution, according to Mr. Rockefeller.

Pointing out that this week is the first anniversary of the Rio de Janeiro Conference of 1942, at which time plans for economic and political mobilization of the hemisphere were made, he averred that the frame work of that conference well may set the pattern for the future world.

"Not only has the development of the interhemisphere good relations changed the history of the hemisphere in regard to the war but may have changed the history of the world," explained Mr. Rockefeller. "One thing is certain, it shows that by the Free Nations in this hemisphere working together, that the United States has given tangible proof that it can cooperate and lead in world affairs."

Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, chairman of the club's information hour program series, introduced the speaker, Mrs. Curtis Shears, president, presided.

G. O. P. Women to Meet

Twenty Republican women leaders who comprise the advisory board of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs will gather in Chicago today and tomorrow to outline the federation's program of activities for the next two years. Committee decisions will center largely around the preparation of the federation membership for its work in the presidential election campaign. This will be the first formal assembly at which Mrs. W. Glenn Suther, newly elected president of the organization, will preside.

Doings of the Day

Lieut. Comdr. Dorothy C. Stratton, director of the SPARS, speaks on "Women in the War," at Junior League meeting at 3:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Allison Houghton, 3003 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest . . . Ruth Mitchell, member of the Serbian Chetnik organization, will be guest speaker at the Women's National Press Club's luncheon meeting 1 p. m. at the Willard Hotel, instead of Nanacy Hale, author, who is ill in the hospital. Miss Mitchell will appear in her Chetnik uniform . . . Science-Technology group of Special Libraries Association meets at 6:30 p. m. . . . Constitution Chapter, D. A. R., meets at Chapter House; Mrs. Claude C. Dimmette, regent, presiding . . . Washington Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society of Denver meets 2 p. m. for dessert luncheon at Jewish Community Center.

It's a busy time for Miss Gisela Warburg, national chairman of the Youth Allyah Committee of Hadassah. At 1:45 p. m. today she will address the Washington chapter of Hadassah and the Business and Professional Division of Hadassah at 8:30 tonight. Both sessions will be held at the Jewish Community Center. She will review the work of her organization in caring for the abandoned children of Middle Europe in Palestine.

MISS WARBURG

A native of Hamburg, Germany, she was one of the principal workers for the Youth Allyah (immigration) movement in Germany from 1935 to 1938 before she came to this country. During a part of that time she was head of the Judgendhife-office in Berlin, which had the perplexing task of selecting from thousands of applicants those who were to be transferred to Palestine.

Miss Warburg knows Palestine well—she's visited there three times. Also, she lived for awhile in England, where she worked to place and settle Jewish children from Germany so that they might receive training and preparation for their future work as Youth Allyah pioneers in Palestine.

TO TAKE OUT SPOTS

To remove egg stains, scrape off excess with a dull knife. If material is washable soak in cold water and launder with soap and water. If fabric is nonwashable but unaffected by water, sponge with cold water and dry. Sponge remaining stains with carbon tetrachloride.

Protect the enamel on your kitchen fixtures by not allowing fruit or vegetable juices to remain on them. The acids in these harm the surface.

Tea leaves or coffee grounds will stain enameled surfaces if left on them for any length of time.

To remove fresh paint, wash fabric with soap and water. If the stain is old, soften it with lard or sponge with turpentine. Then launder. If material is nonwashable, sponge with turpentine or carbon tetrachloride.

To remove fruit and berry stains from washable fabric, stretch the stained section over the bowl and fasten with an elastic band. Pour boiling water over this from a height of several feet.

To remove ink stain spread an absorbent such as Fuller's earth or French chalk over the moist stain. Brush it off and apply another layer of absorbent. Then launder.

IF YOUR NOSE FILLS UP TONIGHT

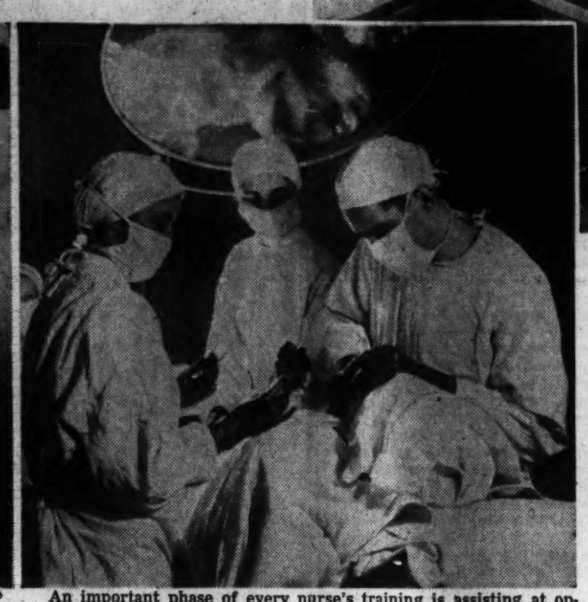
Training to Become a Nurse

Fresh from college, 21-year-old Susan Petty of Lebanon, Pa., arrives at the School of Nursing Residence in New York City, which will be her home until she becomes an Army or Navy nurse. Because of her college degree, Susan will be required to spend only 27 months here instead of the customary three years. Pictured at the right and below are some of the phases of training through which the prospective nurse will go before becoming a full fledged trained nurse.



Official OWI Photos by Henle

Just as they take biology and chemistry, students of nursing "take babies," as the young nurses say. Here, Susan learns how to give a baby one of his first meals

An important phase of every nurse's training is assisting at operations. In this emergency tracheotomy, the doctor is inserting a tube into the trachea as a nurse stands ready to hand him an instrument

A torpedoed sailor receives burn treatment from a doctor with Student-Nurse Susan Petty in attendance. Care of burns gets special emphasis in the education of every nurse today, for war casualties almost invariably include victims of burns

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Toward the end of the second week of dieting, the novelty wears thin and you are inclined to get a bit careless with the calories. So when you step to the scales this morning, the indicator may be up a notch.

A fine thing, you fume. You didn't eat nearly as much over the weekend as you would have liked—only two little pieces of fried chicken, and not quite all the desserts. If every little calories counts, you are not sure reducing is worth it.

Now, hold everything! You don't want to be fat another year. You hate the way stoutness makes you look and feel—it could be the reason, you tell yourself, that you're not having any fun. If you take the fatal view that since you're not getting much else out of life you might as well eat, you will be putting food first. When you do that, you let it take the place of all the other pleasures.

But the worst thing about excess fat is what it does to your health. It is a definite handicap and you can't look on it as anything else. It cuts down your energy and makes you tire more quickly than you should.

With times as tough as they are, not one of us can afford to be soft. The way the majority of the women have come through the last year is a credit to them. They had more gumption than they themselves suspected. But that's not enough. They are determined to be fit so they can stand up to harder jobs and increased strain. Bringing weight to normal is part of the program.

You have made too good a start during the two weeks you have been dieting to give up now. The hardest tussle with your appetite is over. Even though you did give it too free a rein for a couple of days, it isn't far out of bounds.

The rationing is a help to you. The restriction on sugars and fats places a certain limit on these foods. But until you get your weight down where it belongs, you don't need either sugars or fats in normal amounts and you're the girl to cut them to the minimum. That should make it easier for you to stay on your diet.

But the thing that will help most is to see the scales go down. Just one day on a strict calorie count should be enough to get you back on the track. Here is a diet with your calories lower than in your reducing rations:

If you're preparing an oven meal, place meats at the bottom, pastries and desserts on top, and vegetables in the center.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

Back to the Kitchen?

Will women go home again after the war? Or will they hang on to their acetylene torches, their riveting machines, their oil cans, their railroad lanterns and their drafting boards?

What the six million women soon to be engaged in war industry will do when peace comes is causing increasing speculation. Also some uneasiness. If even a sizable number of them remain employed, how will there be jobs enough to go around? Also, what will happen to the home?

The two new women members of Congress, Representative Clare Boothe Luce and Representative Winifred Stanley discussed this problem briefly at a recent dinner of the Women's National Press Club. Mrs. Luce thought the women would go home about as fast as they could get there. She said that on a recent tour of a war plant, she conducted a survey by asking every fifth or sixth woman she came to, "What do you expect to do when the war ends?" and that the reply invariably was "Go home."

Predicts Many Will Hold On

Miss Stanley thought part of the women, especially those in the heavy industries, would go home, but that many would not. Women after past wars, she pointed out had held on in some measure to their new economic opportunities, and she believed they would do so after this war to a greater extent than previously. She predicted that business and professional opportunities especially would be much greater for women after this war than after World War I.

Miss Margaret Hickey, chairman of Women's Policy Committee, War Manpower Commission, also has predicted that the women who are now leaving their homes to help in war industry "will be the first to want to go back home when the war is won." She believes "women want full employment of men."

Survey of British women working in war industry have shown generally the same results as Mrs. Luce obtained—that the women want to resume their home duties when peace comes. This might seem to settle the question. But does it?

The fact is these working women want to go home if—— They do not add the qualifying clauses when questioned because they probably are not aware that they exist. But what they mean is that they want to go home if they have adequate homes to go to; if their husbands are paid sufficient wages to give them and their children decent living standards; if, in fact, many of them can be assured of having husbands; if there is no pressing economic need for them to work outside the home, and if the home offers them opportunity for using their full capabilities.

Many social prophets believe that even if women want to go back to the home, the movement of life is in the opposite direction. All past wars in this country have accelerated the movement of women out of the home, they point out, and the postwar world will bring even greater revolution in the physical aspects of homemaking due to scientific advance and collective activity.

Whatever the solution of the problem may be—and only postwar conditions will determine that—one thing seems certain. That is that all women, wherever they are, will have to work. Nobody will be rich enough—or lazy enough, let us hope—to afford idleness. The feminine parasite, married or unmarried, is in her last dying gasps. The post-war woman will find herself well occupied, whether she be riveting steel, pounding a typewriter, or trying to make one chicken fill two pots.

Found: A Designer

By Jeanne Contini

Marjie Burke is 21 years old with a lot behind her ears besides blond curls and with a face that makes older women want to give her a motherly pat on the noggin and send her off to school with a fresh pinnie. Actually she has a thriving custom business which has been gaining momentum for over two years.

Saturday saw the culmination in a thoroughly professional fashion show of a promising career. Most of the clothes were borrowed back from customers, but that definitely indicated that her things were worn and approved. It all started with an operation that prevented Marjie from going to college. She whiled away her convalescence making clothes for herself. Mother Burke, in that occasionally embarrassing manner peculiar to mothers, took it into her head to show off some of the offspring's products at a club meeting. She came home with a number of orders to everybody's astonishment, including Marjie's. Her deadline for the first dress coincided with a Red Cross convention in which she was active, and consequently the dress was finished at a tea on the lawn of the White House. A more auspicious beginning we couldn't imagine.

Marjie Burke is a Washington girl, although she was the first non-Indian baby to see the light of day at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. She believes with the Stuart Art School and Mme. Lyolene at Parson's, under whom she studied, that we need more of the old French femininity and individualism in our approach to clothes. Cheers from this department. At present, for $10, plus the costs of materials, Miss Burke will design, sketch and make a dress for you. An incredible lot for the money.

Because She Has Never Been in Love, Girl of 23 Has Declined Several Proposals; But Most of Her Friends Are Married, and She Is Getting Worried

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 23 years of age and unmarried. With one exception, all my girl friends are married. My one unmarried girl friend lives rather far from my home and as neither of us has an automobile, we don't see much of each other. She is 20 years of age. My other girl friends, who are married, are between the ages of 23 and 25 years. I am rather popular and have had a few proposals in my time; and I still get one every now and then. I have never yet thought I was in love with any of the men I have known; but I am beginning to wonder if it is necessary to be in love to make a good marriage.

At present, I am meeting officers in the armed forces and some of these fellows would make excellent husbands. I am wondering if I should accept one of these "good catches?" I might say that marrying for position has never been my idea of what marriage ought to be. But I am getting older and since all my friends except one are married, the situation has me thinking. What should I do? Should I accept a "good" proposal, without loving the man? Or should I wait in the hope that "the right man" and real love will come my way? I am beginning to think that might never happen. I have met a fair share of men and it hasn't happened yet; and I am not getting any younger. Please set me straight in this matter. ELLEN.

Love Is Peacemaker In Close Association

DEAR ELLEN: If you will look back over the history of your friendships, courtships and family relationships, I think you must admit that it isn't possible to get along well, for any length of time, in close association with anybody, unless some degree of positive mutual affection exists. Parents and children, for instance, who are linked by the closest tie in nature, can get very much on each other's nerves, as a result of inescapable propinquity, unless they chance (which isn't always the case) to be genuinely compatible temperaments. The same is true of brothers and sisters. And who are the friends you have made and kept through the years? Aren't they people you just happen to like very much, despite their respective shortcomings?—and who happen to feel the same about you? It has been said that a true friend is one who knows all our faults and likes us in spite of them. I am sure you have met some quite admirable people, too,—able, virtuous, nice looking people,—whose company would bore you to tears; whom you couldn't honestly like to save your neck. Doubtless those people have their devoted friends, but you're not one of them,—because you just don't "take to them;" because the mysterious element of spontaneous attraction simply isn't there, on either side.

And consider the beaux you have had; but particularly those whose proposals of marriage you have turned down. Why did you turn them down? Wasn't it because you recoiled instinctively from the suggestion of settling down to a lifetime of exclusive intimacy with any one of these petitioners? Aside from not being "in love" with them, wasn't it because you weren't even greatly fond of them, and didn't much care whether you ever saw them again? I imagine if you had ever enjoyed a heart-warming friendship with a man whom you cordially liked and respected, whose company was as comfortable as the proverbial "old shoe," who knew you "like a book," (which you realized,) and who consistently demonstrated a strong preference for your society as a steady diet,—if you had ever had that sort of friendship with a man, and he had asked you to marry him, you would have consented, very likely, even though you weren't ecstatically in love with him, provided (and it is an important proviso) you never had experienced the divine afflatus.

Don't Make Compromise With Deep Convictions

You would have got married, as many girls do (when as yet emotionally unawakened), on the hopeful assumption that placid affection and well-placed trust must be the better part of "this thing called love." Incidentally, marriages made on that assumption often turn out very well, too,—if the contracting parties are persons of fine character. What happens is that the wife falls in love with her husband after marriage, (1) because she is amiably and guilelessly disposed to love him; and (2) because he, in his devotion, progressively gives her more and more reason to appreciate and cherish him. But the point I am making apropos of your case is that if you never have thought yourself the least bit in love with any of the "fair share of men" you have known, this can only mean that none of them has "what it takes" to win even your liking. So you may rest assured that you have done the wise thing in declining to marry them.

My advice to you is to keep faith with the still small voice of your intuition, which knows the needs of your heart and the chances of fulfilling them better than your conscious mind does, confused as it is by misleading cross-references to the essentially irrelevant "case histories" of other individuals; and which would have you "hold out" for a marriage made on the basis of positive selection. Don't let your girl friends' altar-bound scramble stampede you into making any hasty compromises with your convictions concerning what marriage ought to be. You cannot afford to join the procession unless you feel very definitely that your husband-to-be is a person for whom you would gladly "forsake all others." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

Ill-Fitting Shoes Cause Discomfort, Permanent Injury

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

EVERYONE'S foot has two sizes—one while sitting and another while standing. The size of the foot changes while walking, but the shoe does not. After you have tramped around all day your feet are larger, but your shoes, unfortunately, are not. Shoes, therefore, have a great deal to do with foot comfort. A great many people suffer tortures with their feet because they have weak ankles. High shoes, which have almost gone out of style, are as good for these people as crutches.

Dr. Clendening

The fitting of shoes is a responsibility which is enormously and widely neglected in this country. In every State in the Union a license is required for a blacksmith, but nobody who undertakes to fit a shoe to a human being has to have a license.

A great many shoe fitters do not study the buyer's feet carefully enough or make careful enough measurements and they too easily allow the buyer to select the shoe that he takes a fancy to without attempting to argue him into the one which would give him more comfort.

Functions of Foot

The functions of the foot are support and propulsion. The muscles and tendons arrange themselves to give support to the bones in whatever work the foot is doing. A high-heeled shoe makes the ankle less stable and more subject to strain and puts more of a strain on the muscles to keep the ankle joint in place. A high-heeled shoe, therefore, increases the amount of strain and muscle stress the foot has to uphold.

Every time you take a step the foot receives the shock of contact with the ground, supports the body and raises it forward, and itself is then brought forward, completing the cycle. Heel-and-toe walking jars the entire skeleton and the central nervous system.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Just why young children, heretofore well able to speak clearly, suddenly begin to stammer, is a question with various answers.

It may be caused by temporary self-consciousness about their speech, which has grown so important to those about them. It is clearly probable their ideas exceed their vocabulary. There may be some physical obstacle to the free flow of speech originating, perhaps, from the forced use of the right hand when the left is the dominant one. Whatever the explanation, it is obvious to anyone dealing with many children that this is a most ordinary occurrence.

Mrs. M. Z. believes it began when her precocious 2½-year-old son had a very bad sore throat. She mentions also the confusions incident to moving, a change which was very upsetting to the child. But with a past history of stammering in the immediate family, she is unusually worried about this and wonders what special method she should take to end it.

"I have been advised to stop him whenever and wherever he begins to stammer," she writes. "But I feel that this method embarrasses the child and makes him overly self-conscious about it, as well as spoiling the joy of telling a story.

Your intuition about the suggested method was correct. It would make the child self-conscious and increase his stammering. We have to be more or less unconscious of the mechanics of speech in order to speak at all.

Don't notice his stammering, turn your attention elsewhere when he begins and allow him time to achieve poise and forget his nervousness. He knows how to talk, he has merely lost his self-confidence or else has adopted temporary stammering because he has found it gained him added attention and distinction.

I believe in 6 months you will have forgotten that he ever stammered.

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Post Profile — Mrs. William O. Douglas

Good Will Guild Is Pet Project Of Justice's Wife

Few women in Washington are more active than blonde, pert Mrs. William O. Douglas. It is not at all necessary to identify her or her activities. As wife of the Supreme Court's youngest justice; as the mother of two lively children, and as the president for the past three years of Good Will Guild, she has led a busy and fascinating life here.

Mrs. Douglas presides over the organization which is set up to do welfare work for the employes of the Good Will Industry, a separate body employing men and women with physical disabilities. Through the medium of the Guild the employes receive all kinds of medical care. "It is not in any sense charity," explained capable Mrs. Douglas, "although the actual bills are paid by the Guild, the employe pays back whatever he can over a period of time."

The Good Will Industry, which came into existence eight years ago, has rapidly converted itself into a war industry. Center of their activities is the main plant, located on New Hampshire Avenue, where over 100 employes, who are in some way handicapped because of physical disability or age, or who are socially maladjusted so that they may not take on regular full-time positions, are hard at work each day repainting furniture, repairing clothing, restoring dilapidated toys and putting various mechanical devices, such as sewing machines, radios, phonographs, in order. "We handle anything that a household does not need," said Mrs. Douglas. "When the things are put into condition they are then sold at one of our five stores. Some of our employes are the best craftsmen and skilled workers in Washington; for instance, our upholsterer is one of the finest in the city. He is 80," she added.

Harris & Ewing

Practically self-supporting, the Good Will Industry last year grossed $97,000 from its sales alone.

Postwar Planning Already Under Way

Since the war, the Industry has been active in collecting salvage of all types, scrap metal, rags and paper, all of which has been immediately put into Government channels, thus giving these handicapped workers a definitely useful part in the war effort; it is indeed a magnificent work provided for people who might otherwise become demoralized over the fact that they were not part of the war.

Most important of all is the postwar planning for both the Good Will Guild and the Industy. Already converted from a peacetime project to a wartime industry, it has been necessary to increase the staff and general facilities to take care in the future of the people who because of the war will be unable to hold down regular jobs and who still may be very useful. It is with this problem that Mrs. Douglas is at present concerned. "We are working at a rapid pace for we realize that after the war we shall have an even greater function. The staff and general facilities are being improved and enlarged so that we shall be geared to our postwar responsibilities. We hope to provide work for as many men as we can, who have been incapacitated by the war," stated Mrs. Douglas seriously.

Is Excellent Executive and Diligent Worker

Long Bus Rides No Bother to Her

Despite her fragile appearance and charmingly feminine manner, Mrs. Douglas is an excellent executive and a hard worker. Well-trained at carrying a job through, she taught Latin for many years both during the period when her prodigious husband was studying law, and later when he was teaching at New Haven. It is very easy to see that she likes to be occupied, but approaches her work in a practical, pleasant way. She has made her peacetime job a war job which is in itself interesting. Not at all the "dabbling" type, she has stuck to one activity; has watched it grow and concentrated all of her efforts toward making it the long-range program that it is.

Everyone in Washington knows the Douglases as a pair that exudes good humor and charm. The long bus rides from their home in Silver Spring to the Supreme Court and to dinners, don't bother them in the least!

Official Capital to Turn Out For United Nations Benefit

A brilliant audience of nearly 1800 is expected to attend the premiere of "Hitler's Children" at a benefit performance sponsored by nine United War Relief organizations on tomorrow evening, January 20, in R. K. O.-Keith's Theater, climaxing a week of activities dedicated to the United Nations.

Distinguished guests, most of whom expect to ride streetcars and buses in order to reach the benefit, will include many representatives of foreign embassies and legations. Among them will be the Ambassador from the Netherlands and his party, the Ambassador from Poland and Mme. Ciechanowski, and many social and civic leaders who are prominently identified with United War Relief work here.

The Soviet Embassy staff is expected to be present in a body. There will also be a large delegation from the Chinese Embassy. Prominent among those who will represent the cause of British war relief at the premiere will be Lady Broderick, Admiral Sir Percy and Lady Noble, Capt. and Mrs Geoffrey Owen, Capt. and Mrs Herbert Heslop, Mrs. Robert Lowe Bacon, Mrs. Rex Benson, Mrs. Roy E. Lowe, Mrs. George Withe and Mrs. Bissell Norment.

Count and Countess Lasocki, Mr. and Mrs. Michel Kwapiszewski and Mrs. Frank H. Simonds are among those locally active in Polish war relief who will attend the showing.

Tableau to Be A Feature

Stressing the theme of 'The United Nations Children," and augmenting the film showing will be a special stage tableau presented by United Nations children in native costume, assisted by men in uniform from the Allied countries. The flags of 31 nations will be massed in a colorful demonstration of unity.

Charles F. Horner, chairman of the executive committee of the United War Relief Center, heads the committee appointed by sponsoring organizations to stimulate activities during United Nations Week, January 14 to 20. Cooperating with him are Col. Julius I. Peyser, provisional president of United War Relief; Miss Alice Dodge, chairman of the Coordinating Council for French Relief; Mrs. Truxton Beale, chairman, Washington Committee for Greek War Relief; Mrs. John Theophilos, Lady Broderick, representing British War Relief; Charles Carroll Glover, jr., and Mme. Loudon, the Queen Wilhelmina Fund; Mrs. A. M. Fox, United China Relief, Inc., Mme. Ciechanowska, Polish War Relief; Mme. Fotitch, United Yugoslav Relief Fund; Mme. Olga Hurban, Czecho-Slovak American National Alliance; Mme. Avrien Tixier, Mrs. George Worthington and Mrs. Joseph Glasgow, representing the Fighting French Relief Committee, and Paul Nelson, who is supervising the stage pageant for the premiere.

Proceeds Are for National War Fund

As the closing event in the observance of United Nations Week here the showing of the film "Hitler's Children" in Washington is part of a 50-city premiere occurring during the week. All proceeds will be turned over to the National War Fund, in accordance with arrangements approved by the President's War Relief Control Board. Each community will be credited with the amount raised locally, and relief services rendered by the eight foreign war-relief organizations which are members of the local Community War Fund will benefit proportionately.

Fifty young women in costume, representing America and the Allied Nations, will act as ushers at the performance Wednesday evening. Music will be provided by the United States Navy Orchestra.

Husband-and-Wife Artist Team, Just Back From Brazil, More Convinced Than Ever Art Has Role to Play In Shaping—And Recording—World Events and Trends

Back from Brazil after completion of the most thrilling commission either has enjoyed in an illustrious career, George Biddle, painter, and his wife, Helene Sardeau, sculptor, are more convinced than ever that art must be given a chance to do its part in helping win the war . . . and in recording effects of war on the individual.

The two returned from Rio de Janeiro a few weeks ago and are now in Washington for a visit with Mr. Biddle's brother and sister-in-law, the Attorney General and Mrs. Francis Biddle. Their plans for the future are a bit indefinite—at least, they are not yet ready to be divulged—but don't be surprised if you get word soon that each has launched a project in a somewhat different field from the one so recently finished.

When I talked to the two yesterday, however, they declined to dilate on what the future might bring—except in regard to their hopes that the best creative artists of our time would be given an opportunity to turn their talents to portraying war and its horrors for the historians of the future.

'We Felt We Were on Trial'

"In times like these, art must function in the setup," said Mr. Biddle, who for a quarter of a century has been portraying the contemporary scene.

The commission he and Miss Sardeau recently finished adds further proof to his theory that art can play a vital part in translating into graphic terms the onslaught of conflict and the hope for a better world after the war is finished. A year ago, the two were invited by the Brazilian Ministry of Education to come to Rio de Janeiro to decorate with fresco and bas-relief Brazil's national library.

In May of last year, they were sent to South America by the Inter-American Committee on Artistic and Intellectual Relations, and shortly thereafter both were hard at work on the project that was finished last month. "In a way we were both on trial," said Mr. Biddle, "because up to that time American art had received little recognition in South America."

"And I, particularly, was on trial," added Miss Sardeau, "because there was a feeling at first that I shared the commission only because I happened to be married to George Biddle." Incidentally, the launching of the project marked a number of other "firsts." It was the first time any American artists had been commissioned by a South American government, it was the first time a husband-and-wife artist team had been given an opportunity to decorate the walls of any public building in Brazil; and it was probably the first time, anywhere, that artists were given a government commission and then were allowed freedom to carry it through without interference.

Had Complete Freedom in Work

"We had complete cooperation, in every way," Miss Sardeau said. "Temporary studios were set up for us inside the library. Models were rounded up for us. We even had a servant just to do errands. But the best part of all was our being allowed to carry out our own ideas as we pleased."

Their ideas evidently pleased the Brazilian public as well, judging from the glowing press accounts following the first formal exhibition of the work. At that time the Brazilian public had an opportunity to see the finished product turned out by the talented hand of one of North America's outstanding artists and his noted wife.

On one huge wall there is a graphic picture of death riding a wild horse high above a typically Brazilian landscape. In the foreground are gaunt figures of people, dying or dead. The legend of the fresco is this: "Nor hatred, nor destruction nor death will ever ride America." Miss Sardeau's panel beneath bears out the theme of violence. In graphic contrast, a hopeful message is carried out on the opposite wall. A woman, portraying humanity, floats down from the heavens to extend a helping hand to the men and women working in the foreground. The legend—"Intelligence and humanity shall rule our world." A Sardeau panel depicting "humanity" completes the decoration.

"The frescos, of course, carry a double meaning," Mr. Biddle said. "The motivitation actually is that of hemisphere defense, and the message is that we believe we can make a world of our own on this hemisphere, even if Europe does commit suicide."

There's a possibility the drawings for the frescos and panels may be on exhibition here later. At the moment, however, they are still en route back to America, and there's no telling when the ship bearing them will arrive.

Meanwhile, after being away from the United States for eight months, and from Washington longer that that, the Biddles are here for a brief visit, and hoping to find time to renew acquaintanceships with their many Washington friends. A lot of us can remember when, a few years ago, they came to Washington and installed themselves in a home for the winter at 1712 N Street while Mr. Biddle worked on the murals at the Justice and Postoffice Buildings. That same year Miss Cardeau completed her commission under the Treasury Department art program of a bas-relief which was placed in the lobby of the new postoffice building at Ossining, N. Y.

Mr. Biddle, incidentally, is an accomplished linguist; says he speaks only two languages well—English and French—but can manage to understand and make himself understood in six others. Latest addition to his many tongues is Portuguese. "He mastered that well enough," pridefully reported his wife, "to be able to make an extemporaneous speech in Portuguese on the day the murals were dedicated."

Army Major and Bride on Wedding Trip

Maj. and Mrs. George MacGovern will make their home in Washington following their wedding trip. They were married here in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church Saturday with the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister officiating.

The bride, the former Miss Anna Betty Anderson, wore a gown of heavy ivory faille, made with long sleeves, and a bouffant skirt ended in a long train. Her tulle veil was held in place by a lace cap and she carried a bouquet of red and white camelias.

The maid of honor, Miss Frances E. Blatch, wore an emerald gown and a Juliet cap of matching net. Her bouquet was of camelias.

Col. Robert Branch, U. S. A., served as best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Wells.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph M. Anderson of St. Paul, Minn. The bridegroom is connected with the control division of the War Department.

In the CAPITAL SPOTLIGHT

Ali Toulba New Counselor Of Legation

To the State Department some time soon will go formal notification that Ali Foad Toulba, who has served as First Secretary of the Egyptian Legation since 1939 has been promoted to Counselor.

The change marks another step in the distinguished career of the man who came here from San Francisco, where he served first as Egyptian Consul and then Consul General for a number of years.

A native of Colombo, Ceylon, Mr. Toulba is the son of the late Maj. Gen. Toulba Pasha Ismat, who was in exile with Arabi Pasha leader of the Egyptian revolution of 1881-'82 and five other compatriots. Before the revolution Major General Toulba had been military governor and commander in chief of the Egyptian army in the Alexandria zone at the time of the bombardment of Alexandria by the British fleet.

Ali Foad Toulba was educated at Kingwood College, Ceylon, the Narich School and the Khedivich School in Egypt, and the Egyptian University, receiving his LL. B. degree in 1910.

He served in the Egyptian Ministry of Justice from 1911 to 1919 and then was appointed head of the English division of the court of the late King Fouad. After serving there for 14 years, Mr. Toulba was named Egyptian Consul at San Francisco and then became Consul General.

He is the author of several books, including "From an Egyptian Pen," and "Ceylon: The Land of Eternal Charm," and he is a member of the Bohemian Club, San Francisco; the Metropolitan Club and the Chevy Chase Club here, and the National Sporting Club, Cairo. He and his wife and their daughter, Ainferr, make their home at 4105 Harrison Street.

Lee Memorial Foundation to Hold Meeting

Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton will open her home on Sunday afternoon, January 24, for the annual meeting of the District of Columbia committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, an organization whose responsibility for the restoration of Stratford Hall, in Westmoreland County, Va., commands Nation-wide respect.

According to Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall, in whose name the meeting is called, the Washington committee is one of many throughout the country whose combined efforts insure the present and future safety of this historic home, famous as the birthplace of Robert E. Lee and of two signers of the Declaration of Independence, Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee. By their individual gifts made in honor of General Lee, members and other interested persons are enrolled by the foundation as Friends of Stratford. Mrs. Aspinwall believes that this group plays an increasingly important part in the Lee Foundation plans for the future since wartime transportation limits the number of visitors to Stratford.

Charles Warren, statesman and authority on American law and history, will speak on the "Patriots of Stratford," after which there will be a showing of a new moving picture in technicolor of Stratford house and plantation.

Stratford as it is affected by the war emergency will be reported upon by Mrs. Cazenove Lee, the foundation's director for the District of Columbia.

Receiving with Mrs. Houghton, Miss Elizabeth Houghton and Mrs. Aspinwall will be the following members of Mrs. Aspinwall's committee: Mrs. Stanley F. Reed vice chairman; Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, Mrs. John W. Davidge, Mrs. Peyton Hawes Dunn, Mrs. Pierre Gaillard, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mrs. Robert W. Parker, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor and Mrs. Richard B. Wigglesworth.

Mrs. Charles Axtell Here From Iowa

Mrs. Harold C. Axtell has as her guest her mother-in-law, Mrs. Charles H. Axtell of Conrad, Iowa. The 4-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Axtell was recently christened Caroline May Axtell at a ceremony conducted by the Rev. Paul Wilbur.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Buynitzky of Washington, grandparents of the baby, were present at the ceremony, at which the baby wore the christening dress worn by her mother and her grandmother. Her father is on duty at Pearl Harbor.

Mrs. William Loman and Mrs. Albert Buynitzky sponsored the baby as godmothers and Harold A. Axtell stood as godfather.

Lattimers Have Guests

Mr. and Mrs. J. Austin Lattimer and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Lattimer of Chevy Chase are guests of their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. John A. Lattimer.

Highest Mexican Military Awards Made at Reception

Dr. Castillo Najera Presents Aztec Eagle to Nine Officers, Diplomats and Civilians

"In recognition of services rendered . . ."

With variations of this phrase, the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, yesterday presented his country's highest order, the Aztec Eagle, to nine distinguished officers, diplomats and civilians and to one other, the Mexican Military Merit Medal.

The occasion was a reception in honor of the recipients, held in the Grand Ballroom at the Mexican Embassy. The more than 400 guests were received by the Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera from 5 to 6 o'clock and shortly thereafter the presentation ceremonies were begun.

Receiving the order, were Vice Admiral Alfred M. Johnson, head of the United States section of the Mexican-United States Commission and Lieut. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, former head of that section.

Also receiving the Aztec Eagle, were Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, Brig. Gen. Amaro Soares Bittencourt, former Military Attache at the Brazilian Embassy, who recently returned to Brazil, Lieut. Col. Stenio Caio de Albuquerque, Assistant Military Attache at the Brazilian Embassy; Col. Erik de Laval, Counselor of the Swedish Legation, who has served in Mexico and is now in charge of Rumanian and Hungarian interests in this country; Dr. Joao R. Simoes Affra, Second Secretary of the Portuguese Legation; Raul Diez de Medina, Financial Counselor of the Bolivian Embassy, and Dr. Tomas Cajigas, for medical aid to Mexicans, as well as medical skill and devotion to Mexico.

Col. Erskine Hume, United States Army Medical Corps, who has been a member of the United States Military Mission to Mexico, was awarded the Military Merit Medal.

The decoration proceedings which, according to an embassy spokesman, were the first to take place in Washington, were carried out by the Mexican Ambassador on behalf of his government. All recipients were men, who in their careers have been either directly or indirectly connected with Mexican affairs.

Mrs. Powell Becomes Bride

The marriage of Mrs. Imogen Taylor Powell to Capt. John Ryan Devereux took place on Saturday in St. Matthew's Cathedral. The bride is the daughter of the late Admiral David W. Taylor and Mrs. Taylor and the widow of John Powell. Captain Devereux is the son of the late Dr. John Ryan Devereux and Mrs. Devereux.

Officiating at the nuptial mass celebrated by the Rev. William Henry Powell was the Rev. F. A. Spence. Only members of the two families were present at the ceremony and a small reception followed at the home of the bride's mother. The bride wore a street-length gown of gold crepe with brown accessories and a corsage of brown orchids. Her only attendant was her 13-year-old daughter, Jean Powell, who wore a dark blue velvet frock and carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Joseph Devereux was his brother's best man.

The bride's father, the late Admiral Taylor, distinguished himself in naval circles, graduating from the Naval Academy with the highest marks ever given at that institution. During the last war he was chief of the Bureau of Ships and is considered by most naval authorities to be the greatest naval architect that this country has yet produced.

Captain Devereux attended the University of Virginia and New York University and was graduated from the National University of Washington with a law degree. He is a captain in the United States Air Forces, stationed at Maxwell Field, Ala. After the war he and his bride expect to make their permanent home in Washington.

Chilean Visitors Honored at Tea

Mme. Arturo Espinosa Mujica, wife of General Espinosa, chief of the Chilean Military Mission and member of the Inter-American Defense Board, entertained at tea yesterday at the Mayflower in honor of Mme. Rene Cortes and Mme. Manuel Quintana.

Both Mme. Cortes and Mme. Quintana are wives of commanders in the Chilean navy and are returning home soon after an extended stay in Washington.

Weddings Continue to Hold Interest

Men of the armed forces continue to take brides as scores of marriage ceremonies are performed in and around Washington.

The marriage of Miss Betty Eiseman to Sergt. Richard Benswanger, jr., was held on Sunday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Eiseman. Sergeant Benswanger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Benswanger of Pittsburgh.

Officiating at the 4:30 ceremony was the Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld. Only members of the immediate families were present and a buffet supper followed the service. The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a traditional gown of white satin, a fingertip veil of tulle held by clusters of orange blossoms and carried a white Bible and orchid. Richard Eiseman, cousin of the bride, acted as best man. The couple left later for a wedding trip to New York.

Parkin—Johnson

On a wedding trip to Lake Geneva, Wis., are Lieut. (j. g.) Richard Lambert Parkin and his bride, the former Miss Patricia Gertrude Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Stuart Phelps Johnson of Washington.

The wedding took place here Saturday at noon at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Armand T. Eyler officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her cousin, Clifton B. Currin, wore a gown of ivory satin with court train and her fingertip veil was held in place with a pearl coronet. Her bridal bouquet was of white roses and bridal wreath.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Priscilla Johnson, who wore a gown of blue taffeta and net and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Lieutenant Parkin, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Charles Parkin of Lake Geneva, Wis., had as his best man Lieut. (j. g.) Richard D. Miller. Ushers were Lieut. (j. g.) Harry Deas and Lieut. (j. g.) William A. Wood.

Parker—Lankford

Ensign and Mrs. Roscoe H. Parker are now at home in New Smyrna, Fla., where he is stationed with the Coast Guard, following their wedding here at the Mount Vernon Methodist Church at 6 o'clock on Saturday.

Mrs. Parker, the former Elizabeth Lankford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Lankford, of Federalsburg, Md., was given in marriage by her father. She wore a dress of powder blue crepe with matching hat of blue felt. Her corsage was of orchids.

She had as her matron of honor Mrs. Margaret H. Cobourn. Ensign Parker had as his best man Ernest L. Hays.

Spars Head To Speak at Junior League

Less than two months ago a 43-year-old Indiana - born woman took the oath of office, and became the first woman to don the uniform of the United States Coast Guard Reserve for women. Dorothy C. Stratton became Lieutenant Commander Stratton, director of the Women's Reserve of the United States Coast Guard. The "SPARS" were born.

Today Lieutenant Commander Stratton is guest speaker at the first 1943 meeting of the Junior League of Washington.

Four thousand women will be taken into the SPARS. The organization consists of the director (Commander Stratton), lieutenants, lieutenants (junior grade), ensigns and enlisted women. The enlisted women are being trained as yeomen, radio operators and storekeepers and will eventually release qualified Coast Guardsmen for duty afloat. No officer or enlisted woman in the organization will be placed aboard ship or sent beyond the continental limits of the United States.

Commander Stratton will be introduced this afternoon to the Junior League membership by Mrs. Robert W. Wilson, president of the Junior League, and Mrs. John B. Martin, jr. Her subject will be "Women at War." The meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton, 3003 Massachusetts Avenue at 2:30 p. m. today.

Returns From China

Recently returned from Chungking, China, is Otis Erich who is the guest of his brother-in-law, Thomas Cunningham, and family this week. Later, he will go to California to join Mrs. Erich and their three children.

Dinner Given For Ecuador's Police Chief

Col. Hector Salgado, chief of the Rural Police of Ecuador, was the guest in whose honor, the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, entertained at dinner last night in the Mayflower's Pan American Room.

In Washington, at the invitation of the United States Government, Colonel Salgado, is the official guest of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who was present at last night's dinner. Others present included members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Government officials and members of the embassy staff.

J. W. Kidwell To Be Buried Tomorrow

Funeral services for James W. Kidwell, who died at his home, 1723 Twenty-first Street Northwest, on his fifty-ninth birthday Sunday, will be held at the W. W. Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin Street Northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m. Burial will be in the family plot in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Kidwell, a native of Washington and a retired telegraph operator, had spent his birthday playing with his grandchildren and went to his room to rest when they left. He died while asleep.

Mr. Kidwell began his career as a telegrapher about 30 years ago, when he was employed by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. He later served with the Associated Press, the old New York World, Western Union, Postal Telegraph and, until his retirement two years ago, the United States Treasury. He ticked off many important stories in his career, including the Teapot Dome scandal.

Mr. Kidwell was a Mason and held membership in the King David Lodge.

Survivors are his wife, Lily H. Kidwell; two sons, Lyndon H. Kidwell of Washington and Paul Kidwell of Glen Echo Heights, Md.; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas N. Roane of Bethesda, Md.; two sisters, Mrs. Wesley Gary of Bethesda, Md., and Mrs. Cora Buel of Richmond, Va.; a brother, Harry Kidwell of Washington and six grandchildren.

MissMcFarland To Be Buried Tomorrow

Funeral services for Miss Mary Cornwell McFarland, retired schoolteacher, who died Sunday at The Cecil, 1126 Fifteenth Street Northwest, will be held at Hyson's funeral home, 1300 N Street Northwest, tomorrow at 2 p. m. The Rev. Albert Evans of the New York Avenue Prsbyterian Church will officiate. Interment will be in Washington, Pa.

Miss McFarland, who was a graduate of Western College, Oxford, Ohio, began a career as a school teacher when she came to Washington about 47 years ago. She taught the kindergarten class at the Cook School here for many years and retired seven years ago.

Miss McFarland was born in Siam, where her parents, the Rev. Samuel Gambel McFarland and Jane Hays McFarland went in 1860 as missionaries under the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. They opened a mission station at Petchaburi, where they served for 18 years until the King of Siam requested that they establish the country's first modern government school for boys, foundation of Siam's present educational system.

There are no survivors. Her late brothers were William McFarland, who was private secretary to H. R. H. Prince Bhanurangse, Siamese Minister of War; Edwin McFarland, former private secretary to H. R. H. Prince Damrong, Minister of Education, who made the first typewriter printing Siamese characters, and George McFarland, founder of the Royal Siamese Medical College.

Col. Altick Rites Today At Arlington

Funeral services for Lieut. Col. Sherman Breen Altick, Air Corps, who died Saturday night at Walter Reed Hospital after a long illness, will be conducted by Chaplain T. W. B. Magnan, U. S. A., at Fort Myer Chapel today at 12:30 p. m. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Before going on active duty April 2, 1942, as a major in the public relations office of the Army Air Forces, Colonel Altick for 13 years had been aviation editor of the New York Sun.

He won his wings during the World War, and at the time of the armistice was serving with the 139th Squadron of the Second Pursuit Group in France.

Colonel Altick was a member of the Aviation Writers Association, the Quiet Birdmen, and New York Aviators Post, No. 743, American Legion. He won several awards for excellence in aviation writing, and was a leader in the campaign for a New York City municipal airport.

Colonel Altick was born in Dayton, Ohio, April 10, 1894, and attended Stiver Manual Training School and Ohio State University. He was promoted to lieutenant colonel on December 4, 1942.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Winifred Altick of 725 West 172d Street, New York, and three daughters, Misses Jeanne, Janet and Jacqueline Altick.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Donald N. Haddix, plaintiff, vs. Letha J. Haddix, defendant. No. 17843. The object of this suit is to obtain a limited divorce by Plaintiff Donald N. Haddix from the defendant, Letha J. Haddix, on the grounds of cruelty. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 8th day of January, 1943, ordered that the defendant, Letha J. Haddix, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. JAMES M PROCTOR, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By ELEANOR E. JOBE, Deputy Clerk. 12.19,26

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. American Security & Trust Co., a corporation, executor and trustee under the will of Julia I. Saunders, deceased, et al., plaintiffs, vs. Mildred Frances Saunders et al., defendants. Civil Action No. 18095. Order of publication against nonresident defendants and unknown heirs, devisees and aliences of Lorin M. Saunders, deceased. The object of this action is to construe the wills of Lorin M. Saunders, deceased, and of Julia I Saunders, deceased; to determine title and ownership of certain personal property and real estate described in the complaint and to obtain partition of said real estate, including real property assessed for taxation as Lot 56, Square 14; Lot 15, Square 526; Lot 32, Square 558; all of Square east of Square 662; Lots 47 to 53, inclusive, Square 668, and Lots 9 to 16, inclusive, Square 1039, in the District of Columbia. Upon motion of the plaintiff, it is by the Court this 7th day of January, 1943, ordered that the defendants Frances Russell Myers and Norman B. Saunders, nonresidents, and the unknown heirs, aliences and devisees of Lorin M. Saunders, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the FORTIETH DAY, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default; provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post newspaper before said day. (Signed) JAMES M. PROCTOR, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By HILDA MARIE GOWEN, Deputy Clerk. 12.19,26

LEO P. HARLOW, Attorney

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Holding Probate Court. In re estate of Albert B. Hyatt, deceased. Administration No. 60225. Order fixing new date for trial and providing for publication. The notification as to the trial of the issues in this case relating to the validity of the paper-writing dated the 15th day of April, 1936, purporting to be the last will and testament of Albert B. Hyatt, deceased, having been returned as to Hyatt Register, Frances Register Weed, Eleanor Register, Charlotte Register, Mildred Register Buckman and Edmond Register 2d, "not to be found," it is, by the court, this 6th day of January, 1943, ordered that said issues be set down for trial on the 17TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1943, and that this order and the substance of said issues be published once a week for four successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and twice a week for the same period in The Washington Post, the substance of said issues being as follows: One. Was the paper-writing filed in this court and bearing date of the 15th day of April, 1936, the last will and testament of Albert Hyatt, deceased? Two. Was the said paper-writing dated the 15th day of April, 1936, purporting to be the last will and testament of Albert Hyatt, deceased, executed and attested in due form, as required by law? Three. Was the said Albert Hyatt at the time of the making and subscribing or of the acknowledging by him of the said paper-writing of sound and disposing mind and capable of executing a valid deed or contract? Four. Was the said paper-writing dated the 15th day of April, 1936, obtained, or the execution thereof procured from the said Albert Hyatt, deceased, by undue influence or duress, or coercion? JESSE C. ADKINS, Justice. A true copy. Attest: (Seal.) VICTOR S. MERSCH, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia. Clerk of the Probate Court. 18,19,25,26

"the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co. can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."

HOUSEHOLD'S RATE 2% PER MONTH ON ALL LOANS

Here are two good rules. 1. Don't borrow unless you must. 2. If you do borrow, get your loan at the lowest rate you can. Household's rate is 2% per month on the unpaid balances. Total cost of $50 loan, repaid in six monthly installments, only $3.58. Many other plans. No endorsers required. No credit inquiries of friends. If a loan is the answer to your problem, phone or visit us.

The WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Friend Says F. D. R. Won't Run Again

AMONG the President's close inner circle no one has talked with him about a fourth term, with the possible exception of Harry Hopkins, and Harry these days moves in such rarefied atmosphere that not ever other White House intimates knows exactly what he thinks or talks about to the President.

However, you can't get away from the fact that some of the President's friends already are discussing a fourth term. They are doing it with various degrees of reaction, however. Some mention it reluctantly, as if they didn't want it, but think it necessary because there is no one else on the Democratic horizon.

Some few definitely believe the President should run, hope he will run, and think he will be elected. They, however, are in a minority.

From one man, not as close as Hopkins but who sees the President frequently, comes this diagnosis:

"It will take wild horses to drag the Boss into running for a fourth term. But he isn't going to say so. There is nothing he loves more than to keep people guessing. He is going to do just what he did last time—say nothing until the last minute.

"However, the picture is different from that in 1940. Then, we approached certain war, with only one man who could lead and unify the country in preparation for that war. The Nation was torn between isolationists and interventionists. We could have been disastrously split, the way the Nazis planned. Only now do we realize how dangerously we were to open attack.

"That was the primary reason Roosevelt stayed on, to bridge us over the war gap. But now that we are in the war, and on the road to victory, he doesn't feel the same way. The issue is not so urgent, and he will not run in 1944."

Note: This friend omitted one factor from his daignosis. F. D. R. also wants to win the peace after the war. To this end, some friends think he should make a deal with Willkie or Henry Wallace to let him handle the peace after 1944 while they handle the White House.

Capitol Chaff

The Army has found a new type of work for defeated Congressmen—semidiplomatic jobs in North Africa . . . Former Congressman Wilburn Cartwright, Democrat of Oklahoma, has just been commissioned a major, and is taking a course in military government at Charlottesville, Va., to become a military governor in North Africa . . . Likewise former Congressman Charles Faddis, Democrat of Pennsylvania, a reserve officer, is on the staff of General Eisenhower. He is handling liaison work among the Arabs and the French . . . The Army finds that men with Congressional experience have a knack for getting along with people and do well in these jobs . . . When Leon Henderson leaves his job as price czar, he will take a rest trip to Latin America. "How far I go will depend on how much it costs," he says. "I'll be a private citizen with no income, and airplane travel costs money" . . . Henderson, who had nothing but his Government salary, could make a small fortune at lobbying or lecturing, but won't . . . Manpower Boss McNutt is greasing the skids for another military man, Brig. Gen. William Rose, in charge of the manning tables of the Labor Utilization Bureau. This is an important job—rating workers and jobs on their value to the war. Rose will be replaced by a civilian. General McSherry has already exited and McNutt is anxious to run the Manpower Board chiefly with civilians.

Knudsen's Sign Language

Bill Knudsen did something the other day which amazed even his friends. They had not suspected that he could talk in deaf-mute language.

Lieutenant General Knudsen was inspecting war plants, accompanied by other Army officers. He dropped in at the Reynolds Metal Co., Louisville, Ky., where approximately 25 per cent of the employes are deaf-mutes.

By shifting the lunch period, the management gathered all the workers to hear a talk from Knudsen. The foreman told him about the deaf-mutes, adding as a jest, "You'd better talk to them in sign language.

But it was no jest to Knudsen. To the amazement of the foreman and the Army officers, he broke into the sign language and carried on a discourse with his hands. The officer gasped, then applauded.

Later, individual workers were brought up to meet Knudsen, and he stood around talking with them in the sign language.

NOTE: By finding war work for these handicapped workers, Reynolds Metal Co. has increased their earnings from $17 a week to $40-plus.

Race Relations

WAR SHIPPING Administration has made an inside report on racial good-will aboard the S. S. Booker T. Washington, where trouble was expected because of a mixture of races under colored Capt. Hugh Mulzac. But when the ship completed her first run, with a checkerboard crew and colored officers, the War Shipping Administration reports that it could find nothing but friendly cooperation aboard.

In addition to Captain Mulzac, the second and third officers, the chief engineer and two assistants were Negroes. Other officers were whites, and the crew were a mixture of white and colored.

The Booker T. Washington sailed from San Pedro, went through the canal and landed in New York. Inspectors found the vessel shipshape, and when they questioned the crew, only four men wanted to quit the ship as against normal defections of half the crew.

Reason for the good-will, according to the War Shipping Administration, was that, after the ship got to sea, Captain Mulzac invited all men from the deck department to take instruction in navigation every afternoon in their spare time, to prepare themselves for examinations and promotions. Chief Engineer Irving Smith, also colored, likewise offered engineering instruction.

Morale was so high at the end of the voyage that the men invested extra pay in war bonds, donated a pint of blood each for blood banks, and chipped in to buy Captain Mulzac a gold watch.

Goldsmith Reelected Hebrew Home President

Charles A. Goldsmith, of Westchester Apartments, was elected president of the Hebrew Home for the Aged for the nineteenth consecutive year at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors held Sunday at the home, 1125 Spring Road Northwest. Other last year's officers reelected are: Vice presidents, Dr. Harry Lewis, Morris Stein, and Morris Garfinckel; treasurer, Sidney Hass; secretary, Simon Hirshman.

Nazi Flier Seized

Maidstone, England, Jan. 18 (AP). Police captured a member of the crew of a German bomber who made a parachute landing and was trying to get away in a stolen motor car after his plane was shot down early today.

For Moving, Traveling and Packing Away Clothes

Wardrobe Trunks . 39.95 to 97.50

Dress Trunks . . . 32.50 and 35.00

Locker Trunks 11.95

A new shipment of these hard-to-get trunks has just arrived. The wardrobe trunks have from 8 to 14 hangers with shoe compartments and three or four drawers. You can even live out of one in your apartment. The dress and locker trunks can be used to pack away your out-of-the-season clothes . . . and to prevent the hungry moths from having a feast on your clothes and woolens. You'll find a size to suit your requirements.

Give More Books—Give Good Books

Give Your Active Support to the

1943 Victory Book Campaign

Now just don't go housecleaning . . . ridding your shelves of some books you never were very fond of. Think how you'd feel if you were somewhere in Tunsia, dying for a good book, and they handed you "The Adolescence of the Sea Gull." Well, sometimes it has been almost that bad. Give with your heart, when you give.

Place them in the "Big Books" at the Victory Booth and near the Elevators on the Main Floor, The Hecht Co.

Portable Vitan Sun Lamp

What if you can't be a beachcomber in Miami. You can still acquire a glowing, golden suntan . . . and invigorating bronzed look. And feel like a million to boot! It's not done with mirrors . . . but a Vitan portable sun lamp . . . which gives you healthful, stimulating ultra-violet rays all the winter long! Tan simulated leather case, with built-in timer that automatically shuts it off at the desired time exposure. Housefurnishings, Seventh Floor, The Hecht Co.

TO ALL CONTESTANTS IN THE

'Make Your Room a Home' Contest

—now being conducted by the Navy Department!

Come in and let us prove to you that $25 can go far toward rejuvenating a room. It can work wonders. A few unpainted bookcases . . . a chest . . . a can of paint . . . a Bates spread with matching drapery. But then . . . let our Home Counselors tell you the dozen and one things you can do. Stop in at their office, Fourth Floor, at any time and they'll soon have you raring to decorate. Home Counselors, Fourth Floor, The Hecht Co.
